Teachers Learn Beef Production

WOMELSDORF (Berks Co.) — Teachers from Berks County got a taste of the beef business recently when they visited several beef farms in the county, along with a family-owned butcher shop and a retail supermarket that features a modern meat department.

The tour was organized by the Berks County Cattlemen's Association in cooperation with the "Ag In The Classroom" program.

Twenty educators from 10 different school districts represented a variety of levels of school curriculum and grades. They were greeted by Sheila Miller, president of the Berks Cattlemen, and Geri Gammel, treasurer.

After a brief discussion of the beef business and checkoff program by Beef Council's executive director Dave Ivan, the caravan of LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — "If we are going to solve the salmonella problem, we must educate the public on good food handling practices," Dr. John Schwartz, poultry extension agent, told about 90 home economists on Monday night.

The poultry industry is tired of being blamed for food poisoning episodes that reveal sloppy food handling practices by vendors.

"Eggs are safe if handled properly," Schwartz told the Lancaster and Lebanon home economists gathered at the General Sutter Inn for their annual banquet sponsored by the Lancaster County Poultry Association and the extension office.

What could be finer than a balmy spring day spent with your favorite Appaloosa? "Nothing!"

At least that's what Alison Farrington (right) and her sister Alida Burkholder said Tuesday afternoon when this photographer visited their family horse farm in northern Lancaster County. Lower Hopewell Farm is noted for breeding registered Appaloosas and a long list of show winnings. Owned by Mr. and Mrs. John A. Farrington, a number of horses are boarded for other owners as well as a long list of family pets from peacocks to guineas to rabbits to a new spring foal named Patric. In fact, the variety of animals that live at Lower Hopewell has prompted a little sign to designate the distance between the old bank barn and the new horse barn as "Zoo Lane." In the photo, Dancing Demon is with Alison and Inexcess of Straw is with Alida. Photo by Everett Newswanger.

Soybean Associations Recognize Farmer

ANDY ANDREWS

MT. JOY (Lancaster Co.) — All it took was time to fill out a two-page questionairre. But it also required a lot of insight into how to market and distribute soybeans throughout the world that helped net a Mt. Joy dairy and poultry farmer, as well as regional grain distributor, the coveted DuPont Young Leader Award.

Jim Musser was recognized by the Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association and the American Soybean Association (ASA) as this year's winner of the award.

About the questionairre, Musser said, "They asked what innovative production methods you used . . . what innovative marketing tools you use to get a better price for your beans . . . and they ask for your thoughts on how you think beans can better be utilized abroad or at home. I filled it out and I guess they liked my answers."

Keeping busy is natural for Musser, who divides his time between his 130-acre dairy and poultry farm and the full-time grain elevator, M & R Grains, Inc., where he is in business partnership with his father, Harold Musser.

Farm 130 acres

The Mussers (Jim's wife Sue and their four sons, Matt, Brett, Dustin, and Cody) farm 130 acres and rent about 260 acres. Musser manages 52 head of Holstein and raises corn, wheat, barley, soybean, and alfalfa. In addition, Musser raises 150,000 hens for his full-time layer operation. The lay-

Brown Cow Lays Golden Eggs

FONTANA (Lebanon Co.) — Unlike the goose, the cow that lays the golden egg is no symbolic creature of a fable.

There's at least one very real cow in Lebanon County that seems to be providing eggs for embryonic transfer worth much more than their weight in gold. And, funny enough, it's not a Holstein.

In the ever-competitive world of dairy breeding and the search for the elusive perfect animal, a Brown Swiss strain owned by 28-year-old Gary Mase may be holding the magic genetic combination every dairyman is looking for.

Times have changed somewhat as to what the best cow will look like and what it will do. Most dairymen own Holsteins and have said, in effect, that the super-strain dairy cows are somehow locked into the Holstein breed. A lot of work and research has been devoted toward the breed.

The other dairy cattle breeds, generally called colored breeds, have, over the years, been looked down upon as somewhat inferior. Complaints about too little milk production are largely to blame.

Each breed has its advocates, some of them strongly opinionated; however, milkhouse production and cost effectiveness are usually considered the bottom line in selecting a breed for commercial milk production.

Mase's registered Brown Swiss not only have put an end to that production complaint of the breed, but have a growing number of dairymen taking a second look at

National Milk Veterinarians Hope To Launch Quality Assurance Program

FREDERICK, MD — The National Milk Producers Federation has joined forces with the American Veterinary Medical Association to develop a plan that dairy industry officials hope will put an end to the negative publicity sparked by reports of drug residues in milk.

The so-called "quality assurance protocol" is designed to further reduce the incidence of violative residues — those that exceed tolerances or other public health limits set by the federal Food and Drug Administration — according to John Adams, director of milk safety and animal health for National Milk.

Numerous farm organizations, including the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Dairy Herd Improvement Association, recently endorsed the program at a meeting in Washington. The plan has the blessing of U.S. Department of Agriculture and FDA officials as well.

This fall, the sponsors hope to officially launch a campaign to educate farmers and veterinarians about the program. The National Beef Promotion and Research Board has committed $325,000 to the project, which also involves drug residues in meat, according to Adams. The sponsors hope to receive the remainder of a price

Now There's A Farmer In Your Area Who Can Make Any Business Loan The Bank Can.

Since 1917, farmers have taken kindly to Farm Credit because we're owned and controlled by people who really understand your business.

Farmers. Just like yourself. Thing was, we didn't exactly lay out a Sunday dinner spread of loans. Our menu was limited, and we knew it.

So recently we overhauled our lending system. We now offer competitive rates and options for loans we never could offer before.
Adjustable rate mortgages.
Revolving lines of credit.
Variable and fixed rate loans.
Terms of 30 days to 30 years. There's even a variety of services including insurance plans.

Some things do remain the same, however. The Farm Credit loan officer you talk to still makes most of the decisions.

And chances are he can do it faster than most bankers can say "bureaucracy."

So think about this for a moment. Who would you rather deal with for your next loan? A banker who merely wants your business. Or a farmer who knows it.

FARM CREDITSM
Nobody knows the field better.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, Mo.
Wednesday, May 9, 1990

USDA DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN MARKET SUMMARY GRAIN PRICES MIXED, MOSTLY HIGHER ON WEDNESDAY. HARD AND SOFT WINTER WHEAT TURNED LOWER AFTER NOON AS MAJOR ELEVATORS SUDDENLY DROPPED THEIR BASIS. CONCERN OVER REJECTION OF A U.S.S.R. BID A MAJOR FACTOR. OTHER WHEATS SHOWED SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT. CORN PRICES SLIGHTLY HIGHER AS FUTURES PRICES ROSE. SOYBEANS SHARPLY HIGHER AS FUND BUYING AND SHORT COVERING AHEAD OF TOMORROW'S USDA REPORT SPURED FUTURES PRICES HIGHER.

UNITED STATES...RAIN AND WET FIELD CONDITIONS CONTINUED TO SLOW FIELDWORK IN ARKANSAS, MISSOURI, KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE. RAIN ALSO HAMPERED FIELDWORK IN PORTIONS OF THE CENTRAL AND SOUTHERN GREAT PLAINS AND CORN BELT. SOIL MOISTURE WAS ADEQUATE OR ADEQUATE TO SURPLUS IN THOSE AREAS. DRY WEATHER PREVAILED OVER MOST OF THE NORTHERN GREAT PLAINS AND THE WEST, WHERE SOIL MOISTURE WAS GENERALLY SHORT TO ADEQUATE. IN THE EAST, SOIL MOISTURE WAS MOSTLY ADEQUATE EXCEPT IN GEORGIA, FLORIDA AND SOUTH CAROLINA WHERE RAIN WAS NEEDED. USSR...SOAKING RAIN OVER THE CRIMEA, WESTERN NORTH CAUCASUS AND THE LOWER VOLGA BENEFITS WINTER GRAINS APPROACHING THE HEADING STAGE. EUROPE...UNSEASONABLE WARM AND DRY WEATHER COVERS THE NORTHWEST. RAIN REDUCES DRYNESS IN SECTIONS OF THE SOUTHEAST. SOUTH ASIA...BENEFICIAL RAIN FALLS IN EASTERN RICE AREAS, BUT LOCALLY WET WEATHER IN THE NORTH IS UNFAVORABLE FOR UNHARVESTED WHEAT. EASTERN ASIA...WIDESSPREAD RAIN FAVORS WINTER AND SPRING CROPS IN THE NORTH CHINA PLAIN. HEAVY RAIN CAUSES LOCALIZED FLOODING IN SECTIONS OF THE YANGTZE VALLEY AND SOUTHERN JAPAN. SOUTHEAST ASIA...MUCH NEEDED RAIN BRINGS RELIEF TO BOTH THAILAND AND THE SOUTHERN PHILIPPINES. SOUTH AMERICA...DRY HARVEST WEATHER PREVAILS OVER MOST OF ARGENTINA. DRIER WEATHER LATE IN THE WEEK EASES WETNESS IN SOUTH-CENTRAL BRAZIL. SOUTH AFRICA...COOL WET WEATHER IS UNFAVORABLE FOR MATURING CORN BUT PROVIDES ABUNDANT MOISTURE FOR WINTER WHEAT PLANTING. AUSTRALIA...CONTINUED DRYNESS FAVORS HARVEST AND PLANTING IN THE EAST BUT SLOWS PLANTING IN SECTIONS OF THE SOUTH. NORTHWESTERN AFRICA...WIDESPREAD PRECIPITATION SLOWS WINTER GRAIN MATURATION BUT BENEFITS THAT PORTION OF THE CROP WHICH REMAINS IN THE FILLING STAGE.

EXPORT NEWS: THE PHILIPPINES PURCHASED 35,000 TONNES OF U.S. WESTERN WHITE WHEAT FOR MAY-JUNE SHIPMENT UNDER COMMERCIAL TERMS.

Greater New York-New Jersey: Can it be? Are those blue skies I see? Clear and very warm through midweek Will it stay? No way! Rain and cold by week's end

Middle Atlantic Coastal: Surprise! The week dawns clear and hot Don't delay, get out and play, this weather won't stay Showers drop, cold snap pops

OPINION

Farmers Have Done Well

Several weeks ago, the Earth Day celebration drew a massive outpouring of homage and respect for Mother Earth and the environment. The amount of national attention the whole event received was unbelievable. It is very fashionable to be an environmentalist. I guess we all want to be one.

But there was something wrong with the celebration. It was more like a wake with the environmental fringe filling the air with their own pollution of gloom. Example:

- Farmers are poisoning the land by using dangerous chemicals in food production.
- The world population stands on the brink of global famine.
- Solid waste threatens to bury mankind.
- Our lakes and streams are polluted.
- If we don't conduct our lives differently, a "greenhouse" change in climate will destroy our planet.

Germany was praised over and over again for being the ideal environmental nation.

"What we just witnessed was not my idea of a celebration or a balanced review of where we are today, or where we have been concerning our environment," said John R. Block, president, National-American Wholesale Grocers' Association and former secretary of agriculture.

"A celebration should have included a tribute to the American farmer, the American food industry and American technology which has been able to keep the wolf away from the door all these years. Food in this country takes less than 13% of disposable family income. No other country in the world can claim the same. And what is even more astounding -- we have been able to do all of this while making a rapid improvement in our environment."

We agree with Block. The life expectancy of our population is extended every year. There is absolutely no evidence of any harm ever coming to mankind from the recommended use of farm chemicals, fertilizers, processing technology, and on and on.

We have systematically been cleaning up our lakes and streams. You can catch big, beautiful coho salmon from Lake Michigan right off a Chicago dock. They weren't there 30 years ago!

The Soil COnservation effort in this country spearheaded by USDA has built hundreds of miles of terraces, and saved thousands of tons of topsoil.

The 1985 Farm Bill established a conservation reserve which has set aside in grass and trees, 34 million acres of fragile land.

Thousands of farmers are putting together their own conservation plan.

Germany may be doing rather well in recycling bottles and papers, but they use five times as much fertilizer per acre as we do and twice as much in chemicals.

The free enterprise, market-driven economy of the United States has left the Communist-central planned economies in Europe choking in their own filthy air.

We acknowledge that there is more to be done in protecting our environment, but we think the thrust of a celebration should be to recognize something good, instead of only espousing the bad. And farmers have done something good.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Continue Forage Feeding

Dairy and beef cattle producers should continue to feed some dry matter while the animals are on pasture. The feeding of hay or silage, when the cattle are turned out to pasture will result in more uniform production. Also, keeping some dry matter in the ration will help prevent serious scouring and bloating.

Some producers provide this forage by way of a portable hay bunk in the pasture area. The animals should consume some of the dry forage along with lush spring pasture. The hay should be fed early in the day, before the herd goes to the new pasture. Later in the season the stored hay or silage will continue to be useful when growth slows down due to dry weather and high temperatures.

To Be Aware Of Corn Insects

With the increased trend toward no-till corn planting or minimum tillage, we can expect more problems with corn insects. Past experience shows this. We urge corn growers to inspect their fields frequently to observe any feeding on small plants. You can have cutworms, stalk borers and armyworms at any time feeding on the corn plant. The Agronomy Guide lists several materials for the control of cutworms and army worms. The stalk borer is very difficult to control because they work inside the corn stalk.

Flea beetles are another insect that may feed on small corn leaves; they create small holes in the leaves but seldom do extensive damage. Sevin can be used to eliminate these small insects, if it is serious enough. Keep an eye on the corn field for the first several weeks and avoid serious insect injury. Always follow label directions when using any pesticide.

For Haylage and Hay Making

Good quality forages can help farmers generate more cash income with little to no additional expenses. And, what farmer couldn't use that right now! Cows produce more milk and livestock gain more rapidly on higher quality forages. The need for purchased concentrates is also generally reduced. So, if you are growing forages, concentrate on improving forage quality and improving nutrient yield per acres.

Most important to quality is stage of maturity at time of harvest. For established stands of alfalfa, harvest the first cutting at the late bud stage; later cuttings can be harvested in the late bud to early bloom stage . . . about 35 to 42 days after the previous cutting. To enhance the vigor and longevity of the stand, at least one of the cuttings should be allowed to bloom. Similarly, the first cutting of a new seeding of alfalfa should be made in the early bloom stage.

Grasses should be cut in the boot stage of maturity, just as the heads are beginning to emerge.

To Safely Dispose of Shrubbery and Plant Trimmings

As we begin to trim the trees and shrubs in our yard and dispose of these trimmings and other plants around the home and garden, it is important to dispose of them in a manner that will not be hazardous to livestock, according to Bruce Hellerick, Extension Horticultural Agent.

Plant debris is often thrown over the fence into a field or pasture. Many times we feel the trimmings will help feed the cattle or horses. However, many plants found in the house or yard are toxic to livestock. Cherry, peach and plum trees are extremely toxic to livestock. When wilting, the leaves are very attractive to animals, but a few leaves may contain enough prussic acid to kill a mature animal.

Other plants which are toxic to livestock are: Yews, Laurels, Rhododendrons, Pieris and most other broadleaf evergreens which contain toxine. Several flowers including Oleander, Foxglove, Delphiniums, Lobelia, Lily of the Valley and Lupines all contain toxic amounts of alkaloids when eaten by livestock.

Care should be taken not to dispose of plant materials into pastures.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW GOD

May 13, 1990

Background Scripture: 1 John 4:7-21.

Devotional Reading: 1 John 4:1-9.

A little girl was busy at work with a piece of paper and some crayons. "What are you drawing?" asked her mother. "A picture of God," was the confident reply. The mother smiled and said, "But, darling, no one knows what God looks like." Without looking up from her work, the daughter snapped, "They will when I'm finished!"

The writer of 1 John said: "No man has ever seen God" (4:12). But he also goes on to suggest that, although God can not really be seen, he can be known. The key is love: "Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God, and he who loves is born of God and knows God" (4:8).

CASTRO, KHADAFI & CO.

He goes even further: "He who does not love does not know God; for God is love. Notice, 1 John is not saying that loving God is enough: "...we also ought to love one another" (4:11). And to make it even plainer: "If any one says, 'I love God,' and hates his brother, he is a liar, for he who does not love his brother whom he has seen, cannot love God whom he has not seen" (4:20).

We are not talking about loving just those who are closest to us. Jesus said that anyone can love those who love us. It is something else to love those who are strange to us. It is difficult for a Democrat to love a Republican, or a Conservative to love a Liberal. Methodists may not find it all that easy to love Baptists and Baptists may find difficulty in loving Jews, Moslems or Hindus. And then there are Castro, Khadafi and the Ayatollah! Must we not love them?

TRUST VS. FEAR

The prerequisite is not lovability. Thomas Merton says, "If a man has to be pleasing to me, comforting, reassuring, before I can love him, then I cannot truly love him." This is true whether he be Jew or Christian, black or white. "If he has to belong to my political party or social group before I can love him... then my love is no longer love because it is not free... It is dominated by an appetite other than love. I love not the person, but his classification..."*

Why do we find it so hard to love the "unlovely"? Often it is fear that lies behind the hate. Hatred becomes our means of responding to and protecting ourselves from what threatens us. And if fear lies behind the hate, it is lack of faith that is the bedrock on which the fear is founded. If we are afraid of God's other children, it is because we do not trust God as Creator. It is as if we think he fouled-up in creating people who are different from us. "There is no fear in love, but perfect love casts out fear." If we live in fear, if we cannot bring ourselves to love others, then we cannot know God. For when we love, we are as close to God as we can be.

HARVESTORE BRANDED™ quality goes beyond words. It's performance day after day. It's strict adherence to rigid specifications. It's the perfect meshing of gears for optimum efficiency

Your equipment can tell the difference. Inferior parts wear out sooner and make management inefficient.

And the wrong service often means long delays that end up costing you more in the long run.

Your authorized independent Harvestore Systems dealer has access to factory bulletins, up-to-date parts lists, and upgrade kits NO ONE ELSE does! He's the ONLY place for genuine warranted HARVESTORE BRANDED parts and service. For performance and efficiency, give him a call.

Soybean Associations

er operation is under contract with Wengers Feed Mill and employees two others full time.

For M & R Grains, Musser stores 250,000 bushels of grain in six bins. The bins hold corn, soybeans, wheat, barley, and roasted soybeans. M & R has about 60 customers in the Lancaster, Marietta, Mt. Joy, Manheim, and Elizabethtown areas.

For his part, Musser has been heavily involved with the Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association, comprised of soybean farmers in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, and New Jersey. Musser has been a strong advocate for producer checkoffs. He believes investing in promotion at the regional and national level.

"A lot of the states in the Midwest have an automatic checkoff program," Musser said. "If you sell a bushel of beans, 2 cents or 1 cent of that goes toward the checkoff program. That's what they're trying to pass in Pennsylvania."

Runoff from Jim Musser's farm in Mt. Joy goes into a slurry pit. The manure is pumped out once a week and injected into the large, round, holding structure, pictured behind Musser. The manure is hauled out twice a year, sprayed on the fields, and plowed under. Musser believes that impending legislation may require farmers to install such a system in the future.

For M & R Grains, Jim Musser stores 250,000 bushels of grain in six bins. The bins hold corn, soybeans, wheat, roasted soybeans, and barley. M & R Grains has about 60 customers in the Lancaster, Marietta, Mt. Joy, Manheim, and Elizabethtown areas.

Money to work

The checkoff would enable producers to put money to work on soybean promotion at a national level.

"In the Mid-Atlantic region, they're trying to pass that whenever you sell a bushel of beans, automatically the checkoff program gets 2 cents out of the deal. And that would go for advertising and research."

According to the Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association, this is the seventh year ASA and DuPont have recognized outstanding young agricultural leaders in 26 soybean-producing states throughout the country. In a release, the organization stated that "consideration for the award hinges on the farmer using his or her leadership skills to lend direction to the U.S. soybean industry."

Musser has also been recognized by the Mid-Altantic Soybean Association for a new manure storage system, which holds 330,000 gallons of slurry. The system was constructed last fall.

Chesapeake Bay Program

"We're involved in the Chesapeake Bay Program," he said. "They make money available to help clean up the bay. We got a grant from the federal government to help build a storage tank to keep our runoff out of the stream.

"We live right beside Chickie's Creek here," Musser said. "When it rained, anything in our barnyard washed into the creek. There was nothing you could really do about it, unless you had a facility to catch and hold it. So we built the storage tank."

All runoff is diverted into a slurry pit. The manure is pumped out once a week and injected into the large, round, holding structure. The manure is hauled out twice a year, sprayed on the fields, and plowed under.

Musser understands that impending legislation may require farmers to install such a system in the future. "They aren't making you do it yet, but I think the time is going to come when you're not going to be allowed to haul manure every day," he said. "You're going to have to do something."

Travel to Expo

Despite his busy schedule, Musser will travel to the 1990 Soybean Expo in Milwaukee on July 27, where he will formally receive the award.

"DuPont is a tremendous sponsor of the soybean associations," he said. "Most of Du Pont's spray materials are geared to soybean production. Out of the dozen or more chemicals that they produce, most of them are for soybeans. So they sort of have gotten behind the soybean associations and sponsored a lot of their activities."

After the trip, Musser may try to find time to take off from the long days. "We take some time off. Dad's still here helping us out a lot. So you know if we want to, we can get off to visit somebody or go to the beach in the summer. It's nice when you have the family here."

Jim Musser, Mt. Joy, was recognized by the Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association and the American Soybean Association (ASA) as this year's winner of the DuPont Young Leader Award. In 1988, Musser was the state winner in the Market Builders Program sponsored by the American Soybean Association and ICI Americas Corp.

Date Set For AGA National Convention

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — The 113th American Guernsey Association (AGA) annual meeting will be held in Evansville, IN, on June 18. The convention, scheduled for June 15-18, will be held at the Bob Greene Executive Inn.

The Indiana Guernsey Breeders' Association has planned a number of relaxing, enjoyable social events during the weekend prior to the meeting. Some of the activities include touring historic New Harmony, dinner and dancing on the Executive Queen river boat and viewing the Lincoln Outdoor Drama.

The youth will also have an enjoyable and educational time competing in the quiz bowl competition, the queen contest and spending a day at the amusement park, "Holiday World." During the annual youth banquet Sunday evening, the national outstanding Guernsey youth will be named as well as the Outstanding Young Guernsey Farmer.

Some of the awards to be presented at this year's convention include the Master Breeder Award which will be awarded to Bernard and Mary Pralle of Onalaska, WI. Breeders and developers of Fauver Hill Guernseys, the Pralles have contributed many years of dedicated service and quality cattle to the Guernsey breed. Their dispersal this past year was the highest averaging Guernsey dispersal in four years.

Carl Fortkamp of Coldwater, OH, is the recipient of the AGA Distinguished Service Award. The 77-year-old breeder of Gold Banner Guernseys has spent most of his life promoting and educating people about the Guernsey cow. His herd of Guernseys has been well promoted locally, statewide and nationwide.

High production awards in both the junior and senior divisions will be presented. These will include high herds for all production levels, junior gold star breeds and high individual production for the junior among others.

Directors for district one and four will be announced during the annual meeting on the 18th. Richard J. Cronin of Jane Lew, WV, and Robert Holcomb of Greene, NY, are the two nominees for district one. All active members of district one are eligible to vote by ballot until June 17. This district is comprised of the states of Connecticut, Delaware, Washington D.C., Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, Vermont, West Virginia and foreign countries.

Donald Peterson of Cashton, WI, and Weldon Peterson Sr. of Malone, WI, are the two nominees for district four which is comprised of the state of Wisconsin. All active members of district four are eligible to vote. Ballots must be returned by June 17.

Following the annual meeting, the National Convention and Heifer Sale will be held in the convention center of the hotel. Approximately 50 head of top quality Guernseys from around the United States will be auctioned. Headlining the sale are Excellent cows with high production, fancy show heifers, embryo packages, bull packages and potential bull mothers.

Reservation deadline for convention activities is May 25. Hotel reservations are due June 1. For more information about the AGA convention, contact convention chairman, Lee Riggs, 1161 Volkman Rd., Evansville, IN 47711, or (812) 867-5035. Registrations should be sent to Indiana Guernsey Breeders' Association, RR2, Box A202, Silver Lake, IN 46982.

DHIA Has A Few Questions For You

Pennsylvania DHIA wants to make new optional reports available that will be useful to help make dairy farming more profitable. We have already started to survey what services other state DHIA's provide for their members. But what we really need to know is what you need as a farmer in Pennsylvania. National Milk Veterinarians tag estimated at $1.6 million from the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, he said.

Among the program's "checklist" of preventative measures, Adams said, is greater use of on-farm screening tests to detect residues in the milk of treated cows. In fact, the organizations will recommend that farmers always test before shipping any milk from treated cows to market, he added.

Many farmers already use screening tests, such as the Delvo-P test. However, Adams said, some currently used tests are not particularly sensitive to certain classes of drugs, such as the sulfas. Part of the educational campaign accompanying the NMPF-AVMA program will focus on which test should be used with which drug.

The education effort also will re-emphasize the need for a proper relationship between farmers and veterinarians who prescribe the use of a drug "extra label." Under established FDA policy, drugs not approved for use in lactating cows may indeed be used if prescribed by a veterinarian under certain conditions. Much of the recent concern about drug residues has focused on this sort of drugs.

Sulfamethazine, for instance, which has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory studies with rats and mice, has been the major concern of press reports in the Wall Street Journal and elsewhere. But officials at the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer-based group that has lobbied for changes in drug regulations and industry practices, also are concerned about other drugs in the sulfonamide family.

"There's been so much focus on sulfamethazine because we know it causes cancer, but the other sulfa drugs are under a cloud of doubt," said Center staffer Lisa Lefferts. "Just because they haven't been tested doesn't mean they are safe."

Other extra-label drugs that have turned up in recent residue surveys include gentamicin, erythromycin and oxytetracycline.

Negative publicity about this issue peaked in January following the publication of a Wall Street Journal article detailing the results of two separate surveys of residues in the retail milk supply. Testing done at New Jersey's Rutgers University turned up traces (the levels ranged from a few to several hundred parts per billion) of various drugs in roughly 35 percent of these samples, but the results were quickly questioned by FDA officials. The agency subsequently conducted its own survey and initially announced that it had found "no residues" in its samples. However, FDA officials recently announced that further test work done on some of the samples suspected of contamination in their original survey had confirmed the presence of residues.

Conflicting interpretations of test results have kept the issue in the news. Moreover, it is not likely to go away soon. Officials at the Center for Science in the Public Interest said they intend to continue pressing their concerns. FDA officials said they probably will soon propose banning the use of sulfamethazine in all food producing animals.

Whatever the scientific findings, the greatest danger to the dairy industry is in the fickle court of public opinion, according to various industry spokesmen.

Lisa Keller, who fulfills that role for National Milk, said the issue has unfortunate semantic implications. "Anytime you put the words drugs and milk together in the same story, you have negative connotations," she said.

Her solution is to try to frame the debate in terms of "milk safety," she said. The quality assurance program follows the same principle.

"It's very, very important that we take measures to eliminate illegal residues," Adams said in reference to levels that exceed the limits set by FDA. However, he added, merely reducing residues below a certain level may not satisfy consumers.

"We are faced with the reality that the public may not accept any level of residues," he said.

his cows' milk component production.

Not only does Mase have Leena, a 3E, twice- 30,000 pound milk-producing registered Brown Swiss that is still able to produce eggs for embryonic transfer, but when she was peaking her production of milk recently, the protein component was higher than her butterfat.

Leena has had several flushings during the last couple of years, but she has remained a consistently quick in breeding back, Mase said.

At 7 years, 2 months, she posted a 365-day 31,098 milk, 1,134 butterfat and 1,183 protein. Her 8-11 record as of December 1989, was 31,311 milk, 1,105 butterfat and 1,157 protein.

Her lifetime to date, with eight lactations, is 167,431 milk, 6,452 butterfat, and 5,888 protein.

She is right near the top for milk production and has outproduced other breeds in this county, including Holsteins, for protein; this is in a county that led the state overall in rolling herd average for 1989.

The production of protein is one key in the value of Mase's animals.

Production Is Key

It is largely anticipated that the federal pricing system will switch from placing importance on butterfat production, which Brown Swiss and other colored breeds are known for, and put more emphasis on protein production.

The reasoning is that the public demand for dairy products is away from butterfat and toward cheeses and other products that rely on other milk components.

The strength of the belief held by dairymen that protein will be more important has been shown in the recent purchase of one of Mase's calves from Leena. A two-month-old calf sold for more than $4,000 during a Brown Swiss Association Mid-Atlantic calf sale. It was the fourth year in six years selling there that one of his calves topped the sales.

"Calves have always sold well for us down there," Mase said. "We've showed down at Timonium and with the sale in Maryland, it helps with the advertising to show there," he said.

Another indication of the trend toward finding cows already producing higher amount of protein and total solids, Mase was recently contacted by a Mid Western dairyman who wanted to buy all the embryos from Leena so that he could use them to conduct his own herd improvement experiments with breeding.

Some people are looking at cross-breeding Holsteins and Brown Swiss to achieve an even better dairy animal.

So far, according to Mase, the first generation cross-bred cow is a good animal which displays an apparent hybrid vigor, but successive breedings to cross-bred cows results in uncertain quality calves.

He said some breeders are working on developing a consistent cross-bred strain that would combine the high quality legs and feet, the high component production, the gentleness of Brown Swiss along with all the best aspects of Holsteins.

Mase mentioned possibly getting involved in such an experimental breeding program, but it is still just in the consideration phase.

He has a consistent buyer for every cross-bred bull calf he gets and said they appear to express the same hybrid vigor with faster weight gains and larger sizes. He said he wasn't sure about the type of meat quality resulting from the cross.

Along with the breeding program, the real money backbone of his operation is the same as for everyone else - selling milk.

Mase is a contract-producer for Wengert's Dairy in Lebanon and he is making ends meet. Right now, with about 35 Brown Swiss milking cows and another smaller herd of mixed breed, including some Hosltein cows, he said he is averaging about 70 pounds milk a day, per cow, in the tank.

His mixed herd, which includes 15 Holsteins and about six cross-breeds, was rated third in the state, and his Swiss herd was rated top in the state for milk and protein and second in fat production.

Some people are looking at cross-breeding Holsteins and Brown Swiss to achieve an even better dairy animal.

Beauty Is A Beast In Production

Overall, Leena's maternal half-sister Beauty, now ending her 10th lactation, leads the county in lifetime production for 1989 certificates. Her lifetime production record was 238,386 milk, 9,056 butterfat and 4,830 protein.

Last year, the county recorded lifetime records for six other 10th lactation cows, all Holsteins. The closest production among them showed 229,254 milk, 8,904 butterfat and 4,746 protein.

None of the other Holsteins with 10 lactations broke the 200,000 pound mark.

Mase said he doesn't dislike Holsteins, he just likes Brown Swiss more. He started with two calves 20 years ago as his 4-H project. They were gifts from his older sister, from a dam she had purchased for less than $100, as a calf.

Brown is Beautiful

The calf that sold for more than $4,000 was the great-granddaughter of his 4-H project calf that can be traced to a herd owned by William Daubert, of Pine Grove.

"The cows are all fed the same. There's no color difference as far as when it comes to feeding them," Mase said. "I feed according to milk production," he said.

"I feed a total TMR and then top-dress strictly on production. I don't see color when I go down the barn feeding cows. I look at milk weight.

"And with my Swiss, I don't stress test, like some of the guys do. That'd be the only reason that some guys might feed differently.

"It does take different amounts of feed for butterfat, but I'm not too worried about butterfat, I'm worried about pounds of milk. I have as many Holsteins testing 4.5 (percent butterfat) as I do Swiss," he said.

As far as government and industry support stressing protein production, Mase said, "I just hope it comes my way, that's all. That's the only difference. I don't think I have to make any changes. I just hope that the market is going to change for me."

The production from his cows is not magic formula. Mase said genetics, luck and care combine to produce high-production animals.

Sire selection is varied as to source, he said. "With Brown Swiss it's a wide open ball field," he said. "There's really no set stud there. So, I have to go with selection with the Swiss. We even get some (semen) privately from some other breeders."

He does his own choosing, selecting first for milk production and udders.

"That narrows it down in a hurry as to what bulls I want to use. Once I have it down to bulls of that caliber, then we more or less fine tune it to what that cow might otherwise need to be improved.

"For instance, this calf we just sold, (the dam) is just an averaged sized cow with a real good udder, so we bred her to a decent bull that should improve stature," he said.

The Holsteins on his farm are all grade animals used as recipients for embryonic transfer and serve him well in that capacity, in addition to helping his mixed-breed herd average a little more than 20,000 pounds milk.

"I'd like to actually go all Swiss, but I'm in no real hurry. I guess I could sell the Holsteins. Right now we ought to cut back because we are running the tank over, but it's too hard to part with some of those good cows," he said. "And it never seems to be the right time to sell them, either when they're carrying embryos or we're getting ready to flush in about two weeks, so . . . "

But the young dairyman does have some different ways of doing things.

Nighttime Is The Right Time

A softball enthusiast who plays in four different softball leagues and on some teams sponsored by agricultural businesses, Mase doesn't follow tradition when it comes to milking hours.

He milks twice a day; at noon and midnight.

He said that, in addition to allowing him the time to play softball and to attend activities with his wife and three children, it has other advantages.

"It's not as cold during the winter," he said. "Midnight isn't as cold as 5 a.m. and noon isn't as cold either."

Also, researchers have suggested that peak times for observing heats are late in the night, around midnight or later. He said the noon and midnight milkings also are "calmer."

'I don't see color when I go down the barn feeding cows.'

Apparently human activity seems to slow down around noon and is certainly quieter at midnight.

Human activity is strong near the Mase operation. His father, Clarence Mase, owns the 70-acre spread and rents an additional 40 acres. The father and son collaberate in a 50-50 deal; Gary runs the dairy end and helps with some haymaking, Clarence crop farms. The two split the milk check.

The Mases raise most of their own forage, but have to buy hay. They also have to buy some high moisture corn in late summer. Gary doesn't use newspaper bedding, but has a steady supply of sawdust.

Calf Survival

In addition to milk money, Gary depends heavily on income from selling calves, especially with the recent purchase price.

Just out of pure economics, he said he couldn't sell a calf for less than $1,000. With such an emphasis on calf-selling, calf survivability becomes an even bigger issue than for most dairymen concerned with raising replacement stock.

Mase said he stresses calving in a clean environment. He's lost one calf during the last three years.

He keeps an eye on the newborn calf to make sure it starts feeding within the first four hours, which, he said they all seem to do.

He also allows the calves to stay with their dams for some time. He said the importance of getting the antibodies from colostrum into a calf can't be stressed enough. And as far as getting plenty of colostrum and follow-up milk to the calf, the feed-as-you-please manner in which a calf feeds on its dam seems to also work better for Mase.

Gary Mase with his son Anthony and the great dam of the Brown Swiss clan in Lebanon County, Leena, a 3E producer of 30,000-plus pounds milk. Her eggs, used for embryonic transfer, seem to have been touched by Midas.

Gary Mase Family

Overall, the Gary Mase family, wife Patty, eldest son Garrett, daughter Lisa, 6, and 3-year-old son Anthony, are all involved with Brown Swiss.

In his first year showing at the 1990 state Farm Show, Garrett took home a Junior champion title earned by his two year-old Meadow Hill Jade April.

Lisa hand-picked her own calf, Meadow Hill Titan Agatha, which happened to give Mase his best two-year-old record last year with a 2 year, 3 month record on 320 days of 17,518 milk, 700 butterfat and 608 protein.

Son Anthony, 3-year-old, got his first calf in October. Gary said it will be Anthony's 4-H project. That calf's dam seems to promise special things. She was purchased as a two-year-old, and is named Quiet Valley Jim Dandy. She has been rated an Excellent and was second high in the state for '89 for protein and butterfat on a 5 year, 3 month, 305 days lactat" n record of 25,820 milk, 1012 butterfat, and 954 protein.

But all of this happy family involvement with the Brown Swiss is threatened by some things, apparently out of their control.

How long Mase remains in Lebanon is unknown.

The farm is now within walking distance of Lebanon City. The developments and houses are visible from the barn windows. It seems that urbanization is swallowing the farm like some huge amoeba devouring a particle of food.

Another problem exists with the farm. Located along Route 241 about two miles south of Route 72, the highway splits the house from the barn and pasture.

According to the Mases, when Gary's paternal grandfather owned the place, officials were in the process of improving Route 241, which obviously originated as a farm road.

The elderly Mase has requested that officials not split his farm in two, but rather he was willing to donate a portion of his property so that a straight road could be built and his farm could be kept intact.

The Mases said that officials, already having designed a bridge for the Snitz Creek, balked and forewent the common sense and practical solution offered by the elderly Mase.

'Midnight isn't as cold as 5 a.m. and noon isn't as cold either.'

Now, one of the most common sites of automobile accidents in the county is the Mase farm: A severe "S" curve splits the home from the barn. The result has been that fencing and a smaller roadside barn have been struck numerous times, and lives have been and remain threatened.

This would seem enough to make many people sell the property and move the herd. But Gary said he isn't sure what his father intends to do with the farm.

Gary said he knows that land prices are far too high for him to buy the farm from his father and pay it off by running a dairy operation.

Lebanon County officials have not taken any steps toward any type of farmland preservation. And like many other high quality parcels of farmland in Lebanon County, Mase said it could very well become a housing development.

"If he (Mase's father) gets his farm sold for a good price, more power to him. You can't afford to farm a farm around here for what you're getting for the price of land.

"We really don't plan to be here for that long. We're not expanding, we're aren't remodeling, we aren't doing any kind of improvements. It's just a year to year proposition," he said.

"I'd love to see pop sell his farm for big money and set me up some where else," he said, laughing, then getting serious, "I don't see much future here. It's too close to town and the land's getting too salty. So I don't see how I could afford to buy.

American Ag Movement/Chicago Trade Board At Odds

WASHINGTON, D.C. — American Agriculture Movement (AAM) President Harvey Joe Sanner, said today, "When Judge Marovich denied the Chicago Board of Trade's (CBOT) motion to dismiss our lawsuit against the CBOT, we the farmers took a tremendous step forward. We will get our day in court."

Last week a Federal District Court Judge denied a motion by the CBOT to dismiss the lawsuit, and instead ruled that the soybean growers may proceed with their claims. The suit alleges that the Board and its directors issued the July 11 emergency resolution for the purpose of driving the price of soybeans down, thereby creating huge profits for themselves, their brokerage houses and certain major grain merchants.

Sanner says he is amazed at the CBOT's ability to spread misinformation. "I can't believe that the Board would claim victory now and be able to convince the press to publish reports that it won the recent motion to dismiss. I am beginning to understand how the commodities markets are manipulated through rumor, false press releases, and innuendo."

In a news release on April 26, the Board of Trade claimed Court rules in favor of CBOT emergency action. In addition, the court's decision affirms that our actions have been taken in the best interest of the nation's markets and not any isolated market segment. "This is a lie. The court made no such finding" says Sanner, "and in fact, the farmers won the motion to dismiss." The Board also told the press, "The court expressly stated with respect to the remaining counts (three of the original four) that the Exchange's arguments are persuasive but that a different motion will be necessary to dispose of those counts.

"This is absolutely a misstatement of what the court said" Sanner remarked. "The court stated that it cannot accept defendants' (CBOT) version of the facts on a motion to dismiss. If defendants (CBOT) can support (their arguments) by way of affidavit or otherwise (proof), this court will consider those arguments by way of a motion for summary judgment. In particular, the court said that the Board would have to present the results of any pre-Resolution efforts which defendants may have undertaken to get Ferruzzi to voluntarily after its position in the market. The facts are that Ferruzzi had already agreed to reduce its position as it had done with the May contract. Even the CFTC's own analyst said he did not know why the Board did what it did."

"We realize that the Board has an awesome public relations ability. What disturbs us is that the press would not even take the time to read the judge's opinion and instead reported a one-sided, biased, absolutely misleading story," Sanner says.

"AAM continues our efforts in the 1990 Farm Bill to raise commodity loan rates, index price supports to account for increases in production costs, and put in place a program with higher prices for soybean farmers. We must also stop the abuse and manipulation in the market place," Sanner added. "Until we do, agriculture has no possible chance of moving toward better times. For too long American farmers have been the victims of a cheap food policy, low prices mandated by Congress and commodity markets controlled by the grain trade and speculators. AAM believes enough is enough. We will not stand silently by and watch American agriculture be destroyed and the value of America's harvest stolen."

cars set off for the first stop, the farm of Andrew Kurtz, Womelsdorf. Here they learned about a commercial beef cow/calf operation which also finishes the calves it produces for local markets.

Kurtz, who has been in the beef business for about 10 years, explained how his brood cows represent offspring of his grandfather's dairy herd that was bred to beef bulls when he decided to go out of dairying. Kurtz continues to utilize the service of a Polled Hereford bull in his breeding program, thereby naturally taking the horns off his calves. The young beef producer noted his choice in feeding programs was to not use any growth-promotion implants and to fatten his cattle with corn and alfalfa raised on his farm. Kurtz finishes both steers and heifers, when the female calves "don't cut it" to remain in his herd.

The teachers traveled a short distance to the Stouchsburg farm of Clair Zimmerman where they saw another level of beef production. Zimmerman fattens roughly 110 head of steers each year using a computerized, automated feeding system. His family operation produces all the livestock feed for his cattle, mostly steers, which are purchased from Virginia farms. Zimmerman said he has tried different methods of marketing his finished cattle, using both direct sales to packers and local livestock auctions.

Curtis Himmelberger, owner of Hi-Way Meat Market, Stouchsburg, explained how his family-owned business fit into the beef business tory. For many of the teachers, a side of beef on the rail was a new subject.

Clair Zimmerman, Berks County beef producer, was surrounded by teachers who took on the role of "questioning students." Zimmerman explained how he fattens more than 100 head of steers each year using an automated, computerized feeding system.

Hi-Way Meat Market of Stouchsburg, owned by Curtis Himmelberger, gave the teachers the opportunity to see the end product of the live beef business. The teachers learned first-hand where the various cuts of meat are found in a steer carcass, which they saw split on the rail. Himmelberger explained how roughly 50 percent of a steer's weight is lost from live weight to retail sale, especially if the carcass is permitted to age.

At Dutchway Market, Myerstown, the teachers heard how this large supermarket purchases mostly select boxed beef and "no-roll" quarters to satisfy its consumers. Meat manager Steve Habecker showed the group some of the innovative marketing he has incorporated into his department, such as stir-fry beef packages complete with vegetables; pre-stuffed veal cordon bleu; rolled stuffed flank steak; and others. He noted the need to offer quick and easy meat packages for today's fast-paced families. Habecker also organizes annual cooking classes which feature beef recipes, along with cooking and nutritional information from the Pennsylvania Beef Council.

The final stop on the tour was MAP Farm, Womelsdorf, which provided a contrast from the commercial beef production the teachers had previously seen. Owned by Mike and Martene Firestine, MAP Farm raises purebred Polled Hereford cattle. Firestine, who is secretary of the Berks Cattlemen's Association, discussed the record-keeping requirements of the purebred beef business, along with information on showing cattle as an advertising tool.

ELITE NUTRITION
MANNA PRO

Hot weather is a major stress factor on your dairy cows' ability to produce their maximum potential. As a cow's body temperature increases she tends to experience a depressed appetite resulting in less intake of total feed. This leads to:

A.) A Drop in Milk Production.
B.) Depressed Butterfat Levels.
C.) Reduced Reproductive Performance.
D.) All of the Above – and none are Beneficial.

Thermolass, with it's high level of sugars provides a "quick-release" source of energy. In addition, Thermolass has proven to be a stimulant in increasing the cows appetite and aids in increasing rumen activity resulting in:

A.) Increased net energy content of the total diet.
B.) Increased digestibility performance.

The extra, "quick-release" energy, increased appetite, and stimulated rumen activity translates into healthy cows producing more milk and maintaining or slightly improving butterfat levels.

Lebanon Calf Tops Mid Atlantic Brown Swiss Sale

FREDERICK, Md. — The 16th Mid Atlantic Brown Swiss Calf Sale held here recently and saw 20 calves and one bred heifer for an average of $931.67.

The top selling animal was a March ET calf sired by Blessing Elegant Magnum. Consigned by Gary Mase, Lebanon, the young heifer sold for $4,100.00 to Bill and Cindy Warner, Frederick, Md. Contending bidders were Tom and Joy Crothers, of Oxford, Pa.

Second high selling animal was purchased by Robert W. Sigler, Middletown, Md., for $1,350.00. The senior calf, sired by Talisman Senator, was consigned by Allen and Tammy Bassler, Upperville, Va.

Adrianne Eader, Frederick, Md., was the purchaser of the next high seller. A Jubilation daughter, also consigned by Gary Mase, was sold for $1,150.00.

Wayne Sliker, St. Paris, Ohio auctioneered the sale.

The Brown Swiss Juniors had an auction and raised nearly $600. Junior members also helped lead the calves during the sale. Those participating were: Jennifer Keilholtz, Adrianne Eader, Mark Valentine, Amanda Valentine, Laura Sigler, and Robert Sigler.

Other animals selling for $1,000.00 or more were:

Poultry Seminar Held

contain bacteria. Even if the shell becomes contaminated from contact with cages, feces, and parts of the bird or during handling, the egg's natural defense fights the bacteria.

• The pores of a freshly laid egg are blocked by a coating called the cuticle. It blocks the egg pores and protects the egg up to 100 hours after it is hatched.

• If that cuticle breaks down and bacteria does get into the shell pores, the virus must first penetrate two membranes that inhibit bacterial growth before it can reach the egg white.

• The pH level of the egg white has a high alkaline level, which also serves as a defense since it does not have the nutrients necessary for bacterial growth.

•The egg's final defense is a dense layer that contains bacterial antibodies that surrounds the egg yolk before the salmonella bacteria can penetrate the yolk.

Industry's defense

In addition to the natural defenses of the egg, the poultry industry is taking additional steps to insure that eggs are free of bacteria.

When eggs reach the processing plant, the eggs are washed and sanitized. Cultured eggs for salmonella show only a 0-4 percent positive count before washing and a mere 0 to .1 percent after washing and sanitation.

Eggs are also kept refrigerated on the farm, in the plant, and during truck transportation.

Blood tests are also given to breeder chickens and a strict monitoring program of both birds and eggs is observed.

"Eggs in Lancaster County are safe to eat," Schwartz maintained. "And the safest egg to eat is right out of the shell."

For salmonella to grow, four things are needed. It must have a food source, moisture, favorable temperature, and a time period.

Cases where salmonella has caused illness have revealed that poor food handling practices were present. In one case, chocolate mousse sat unrefrigerated for three days. In another, a lunch truck had a stove that did not heat above 100 degrees.

An estimated 5,277 eggs are produced every minute in Lancaster County and feed 9.5 million people. Paul Sauder, of Sauder's Penn Dutch Eggs, said, "You have a 100 times greater chance of being electrocuted in your home than in getting salmonella poisoning from eggs."

He asked, "If egg contamination is so bad, why don't we have sick people up and down the East Coast?"

Egg handling tips

Home economists were encouraged to teach their students that eggs are perfectly safe to eat when the following handling practices are observed:

• Buy only refrigerated eggs — not eggs stacked in store aisles.

• Refrigerate eggs at 40 degrees or below as soon as possible after purchase.

• Eggs should always be cooked. Never eat raw eggs.

• Foods containing eggs should always be refrigerated at a temperature of 40 degrees or below. Keep hot foods above 140 degrees.

• Do not leave broken-out eggs or egg dishes at room temperature more than one hour, including preparation and serves.

• Do not use cracked or broken eggs.

• Always wash hands with soap and water before preparing food.

• Thoroughly wash dishes, countertops, and cutting boards that have been in contact with raw meat or eggs.

Plant tour

Home economists toured Sauder's egg processing plant to observe the company's special emphasis placed on egg safety and to learn about new egg products.

To ensure proper egg processing methods at the plant, a quality control inspector and an U.S.D.A. inspector are on duty during the plant's three shifts that work around the clock.

Despite the industry's strict safety standards, Sauder said that there is no law against serving unrefrigerated eggs to the public. He said that too often restaurant personnel let eggs sit at room temperature overnight and for hours next to a hot grill because they believe eggs fry better if held at room temperature.

One of the new products that the company is trying is hard-cooking eggs for restaurants and consumers.

William Murray, in charge of product development for Sauder's, explained that the process is very tricky and that few companies sell hard-cooked eggs.

The plant steams the eggs at 180 degrees before moving them to a cooling tank. Hard-cooked eggs are kept in the shell for consumer use, but are put through a peeling machine and then packed in plastic bags for food service operations.

Home economists listen as Paul Sauder explains the egg processing operation during a tour of the Sauder Penn Dutch Eggs facilities on May 7.

Recycling methods

Although some people prefer a biodegradable egg carton, Sauder said it is the biggest joke on consumers. Biodegradable products are not biodegradable without water and air, which do not exist in sealed landfills.

Three weeks ago the FDA gave authority to have foam egg cartons recycled into egg cartons. "The problem is getting the egg cartons back for recycling," Sauder said.

Grange Seeks To Eliminate Widow Tax

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)— Officials with the Pennsylvania State Grange testitified before the state Senate Finance Committee recently in support of eliminating a portion of the present inheritance tax law.

David Hanks, a Grange member and Lancaster County farmer, said, "We believe that the present inheritance tax structure places an unnecessary burden on the transfer of a family farm to a surviving spouse."

By subjecting transfers of farm property to an unnecessary tax the Grange feels the state imposes a substantial toll on the continued operation of a farm and inevitably contributes to the further loss of agricultural land in the state.

The Grange, which represents more than 42,000 farmers and rural Pennsylvanians, supports Senate Bills 776 and 1444, which would create a spousal exemption in the state's inheritance tax.

"The farm is usually the principal asset of a married couple and, generally, the only source of revenue," Hanks said. "The imposition of inheritance tax on the transfer of farm property to a surviving spouse who has worked decades on the farm imposes a difficult tax burden at a most vulnerable time."

Often, when one spouse dies, the "widow's tax" requires, in effect, the survivor to "buy back" the family farm from the estate. Although the transfer of farm property held in joint ownership is not subject to tax, such an ownership is not always possible or practical.

Certainly, not all of Pennsylvania's 55,000 farmers are knowledgeable of potential inheritance tax problems as they go about their routine farm matters, such as registering livestock or financing a tractor.

"The death of a spouse is always a difficult, emotional experience and certainly is not an appropriate time for the state to impose a tax on the transfer of a farm, livestock or farm equipment to a grieving widow," Hanks said.

Kutztown Festival Set

KUTZTOWN, PA — "What's new?" is a question that many visitors to this summer's 41st Annual Folk Festival will ask. However, "new" is not what is important at this Pennsylvania Dutch celebration, which will be held from Saturday, June 30, through Sunday, July 8, 1990. Traditions, keeping customs and folkways alive, and showing visitors old-fashioned methods are the important things at the Kutztown Folk Festival.

Each afternoon, on the Main Stage, many people bring aspects of the unique Pennsylvania Dutch culture to life. The programs begin with a half-hour performance by the Heidelberg Polk Band; then, Jane Stinsmen hosts a program filled with samples of delicious Pennsylvania Dutch foods and the cooks that create them. Next, visitors may enjoy over an hour of Pennsylvania Dutch music, songs, and humor by Leroy Heffentrager and his Dutch Band. They are joined by Mel Horst, as "Jakey Budderschnip," who entertains visitors with Pennsylvania Dutch dialect stories and jokes. The programs continue as Carl C. Groff auctions a variety of articles at a Pennsylvania Dutch "sale." The afternoon's entertainment concludes when the Brintzenhoff's join Leroy for more music and folk songs.

Of course, visitors may want to spend some time at the Seminar Stage as well. There, John Stinsmen brings many aspects of the Pennsylvania Dutch culture to visitors' attention. Whether the subject is metal or wood-working, quilting, the "Plain" people, or music, the hosts of these programs are exports in their fields and are willing to answer any questions that visitors might have.

Twenty, daily, special events also deserve some attention. Visitors may see Grandmother's kitchen and how she made her cookies; they may see glass blown or metal cast; they may learn the Pennsylvania Dutch dialect or about herb gardens or about honey bees; they may see a sheep shearing or a horseshoeing or watch the animals in the Animal Lore Tents; or they may join the "congregation" at the Old Oley Union Church to sing some of the old-time favorite hymns.

Visitors will find over 200 craftsmen who demonstrate how to make their wares. Skills that belong to the 18th & 19th Centuries have found a home in the 20th Century at the Kutztown Folk Festival. Quilting, wood-working, metal-working, basket weaving, and pottery-making are just a few of the time-honored skills visitors will see here.

So, come and bring your family to taste our delicious food, hear our music, and see our craftsmen at work. It is an experience that will bring back memories and make new ones.

Acreage Reporting Deadline

LIONVILLE (Chester Co.) — The Chester and Delaware County Office of the USDA-Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service recently announced deadlines for reporting planted 1990 crop acreages.

All farmers in both counties are encouraged to visit the office and report acreages. Acreage reports are used for computing deficiency payments, maintaining crop acreage bases, and establishing crop history. Deadlines, as announced, are as follows:

Small grains: June 15, Corn, Soybeans, Hay, ACR and CU: July 15.

The 1990 Farm Bill is scheduled to be completed by the end of July. Producers should be reminded of the importance of having bases established as it is a possibility new programs will be available. Crops may not be reported until planted.

National Ayrshire Sale Sets Record

BRANDON, Vt.— As the spotlight came up on the sale ring set up in the Ballroom of the Indianapolis Marriott, April 14th, ringmen, dressed in white dinner jackets, took their places and the 1990 Grand National Ayrshire sale began. Three hours later, two all-time records were broken.

The 28 live lots averaged $3,194, breaking the all-time sale average. The 19 embryos sold for an average of $514 per embryo.

Covey-Farms CVR Karman, a stylish, growthy senior yearling, and the 1989 Reserve All American Sr. Calf, topped the sale. When the biddding was finished, Covey-Farms of Locust Grove, OK received $13,000 from the Karman Syndicate, Georgetown, NY.

Kellcrest Laura Lee consigned by the Laura Lee Syndicate, Preston, MN, was the second high selling animal at $9,600. This senior calf, from the highest production cow family in Canada, sold to J.L. and Betty Gaddis of Bonfield, IL.

Owl-Canyon Canary Rose, a five-year-old cow, with several recent test days over 100 lbs., was consigned by Dr. Charles Hanson, Beulah, CO. This animal went to Green Meadows Farm, Inc., Elsie, MI for $5,000.

Fourth high selling animal, Jonesvale Jade Celebrity, consigned by Oakley Jones, Athens, ME, was the 1989 All American Sr. Calf. She sold for $4,500 to James and Joan Meuller, Cuba City, WI.

Rounding out the top five selling animals was Cedarvale Sky Brite, consigned by Cedarvale Farm, Boggstown, IN. This senior two year old showed great strength and stature and was purchased by Lynette Lubben, Thomasboro, IL for $4,000.

The 37 lots came from 13 states and sold to 17 states. The total sale average including embryos, pick of the flush and live animals, was $2,743.

The 1990 Grand National Ayrshire Sale was managed by the Ayrshire Cow Connection, the official marketing service of the Ayrshire Breeders Association. For more information about selling or purchasing Ayrshires, contact the ACC at (800) 343-7107 or (802) 247-5774.

Two Elected To Eastern Board Of Directors

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Jerrel Heatwole of Greenwood, Del., has been elected to the Board of Directors of Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative.

He succeeds Lee Ressler of Conestoga, who retired from farming after serving on the board for two and a half years.

Heatwole represents 200 farm families in District 8, which encompasses southeastern Pennsylvania and parts of Delaware and Maryland.

A 1976 graduate of Rosedale Bible Institute, Irwin, Ohio, Heatwole worked on an uncle's beef farm for two years and then on a cousin's dairy farm for another two years before going into the construction business.

In 1984 he purchased his own 82-acre farm, where he usually milks 50-60 Holsteins.

He joined Eastern in 1987 and has been active as a delegate, representing Delaware member-farmers at Eastern's general business meetings.

In 1988 Heatwole was honored by DHIA for having highest milk production, and in 1987 and 1988, for highest milk fat.

Heatwole and his wife, Alma Jean, have four children, Jerrel Jr., David, Gabriel and Carmen.

Robert Thomson Jr., of Wyalusing, has also been elected to the Board of Directors.

He will complete the unexpired term of R. LaVerne McCarty of Forksville, who served on the board for more than eight years before resigning in the last year of his third three-year term.

Thomson will face another election in the fall before beginning his first full three-year term.

As a member of the board, Thomson represents about 175 farm families in District 2 encompassing most of Pennsylvania's Bradford County and parts of Lycoming, Sullivan, Susquehanna, and Wyoming counties.

He operates a 600-acre farm with 130 milking cows and 120 head of young stock, in partnership with son Keith.

A member since 1956, he has been active in the co-op as a local president and delegate, as well as on the board of Eastern Laboratory Services, a wholly owned subsidiary.

Thomson also has been active in other agricultural organizations, including PFA, DHIA, Bradford County Holstein Club, Sire Power, Extension Executive Board and State Extension Board.

A 1951 graduate of Cornell University, Thomson managed a farm in Ohio for three years before coming to his present farm in 1955. He and his wife, Olive, have four sons, Robert, Keith, Clay and Nelson.

Jerrle Heatwole, elected to Eastern Board of Directors.

Robert Thomson Jr., elected to Eastern Board of Directors.

Olive serves on the Towanda Library Board and formerly served on the Towanda Memorial Hospital Board and the Towanda Area School Board.

Son Keith is president of the Bradford County Holstein Club and Keith's wife, Traci, serves on the Dairy Promotion Board.

Eastern Milk is a dairy cooperative headquartered in Syracuse, N.Y. It has 2,800 member farms in nine states, with a high concentration in Pennsylvania, New York and Vermont. The co-op also serves member-owners in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

Those member farmers own two cheese plants in New York's southern tier, which are leased to Leprino Foods, a leading manufacturer of mozzarella in the U.S.

Also, Eastern operates a New England office in Montpelier, Vt.; a balancing plant in Grover, Pa., and milk receiving stations in Dover, Del., Sunbury, Pa., and Hinesburg, Vt.

Breakfast Meeting Set

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—A breakfast meeting for dairy sales and service people has been scheduled by the Lancaster County Extension Service to be held Wednesday, May 16 at the Harvest Drive Restaurant in Intercourse. Starting time is 7 a.m.

Glenmn Shirk, dairy extension agent, said 1989 presented dairymen with a variety of challenges and opportunities and some of the impact of last year will carry over into 1990. Since dairymen look to sales and service people for advice, this breakfast meeting will help address these concerns.

Jud Heinrichs, Penn State will discuss: "What have we learned in 1989 that will help us feed the herd in 1990." Heninrichs will also discuss coccidosis in calves.

Robert Anderson, Lancaster extension agent, has the topic: "Evaluating alfalfa stands and alternative feed crops."

The cost of the breakfast is $5.25 and reservations should be made with the Lancaster extension office by Monday. Call: (717) 394-6851.

Governor's Conference To Focus On Future Of Forests

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Prospects for Maryland's 2.4 million acres of forest land will receive high priority May 21 and 22 during the Governor's Conference on Trees and Forestry in the Ramada Inn at Annapolis.

Maryland residents who attend will have opportunity to help shape policy that will affect the status of trees and forests in the state for many years. The public is invited to participate.

Key objectives of the conference are as follows:

• Distinguish, elevate and plan for forestry's continued economic, social and environmental contributions.

• Enhance public recognition of the importance of trees and forestry to the future of Maryland.

• Unite and focus political action on Maryland's forest resources, along with public commitment to that goal.

• Develop action-oriented legislative initiatives for trees and forestry in Maryland.

A steering committee developed the conference agenda, based on the findings of a 33-member task force appointed by Gov. William Donald Schaefer.

Representing a cross section of private industry, non-profit organizations and government agencies, the task force examined key issues affecting the future of trees and forestry in Maryland.

The task force divided itself into three working groups to give separate attention to the topics of social land use, economics, and environmental considerations.

Following the conference, the task force will present recommendations and a final plan of action for consideration by Gov. Schaefer and his Commission on Growth in the Chesapeake Bay Region.

Registration cost for the two-day conference, including the evening banquet, is $40 before May 15, or $50 at the door. Students may attend for $25. Anyone who registers before the May 15 deadline will receive advance copies of the task force report.

Printed programs and registration forms are available from the Forest, Park & Wildlife Service, Maryland Department of Natural Resources, 580 Taylor Ave., Annapolis, Md. 21401; phone: (301) 974-3776.

The brochures can be picked up at offices of the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service in every county throughout the state and in Baltimore. Or you may contact one of the regional Extension natural resources specialists. In the Eastern Shore- Robert L. New Quality Assurance Program

COLUMBUS, Ohio — ProScience Corporation has implemented a new quality assurance program in an effort to make the ProStaph I™ Staph, aureus test more consistent and accurate.

According to Dr. Tatsuo Matsushita, vice president of technical operations at ProScience, this new program will ensure quality in DHIA labs by evaluating the performance of participating DHIA labs and DHIA lab technicians who run the ProStaph I™ test.

"The new quality assurance program has been in place since February and our primary objective is to ensure consistent results across the country from month-to-month," said Matsushita. "All labs are required to run these samples twice monthly to establish repeatability.

"It's been a year since we've introduced this new ELISA technology to the DHIA System and we feel it's our obligation to set up a quality assurance program as this for the benefit of DHI members," he said. "The skill levels of DHI lab technicians who are using this technology have already increased as a direct benefit of the program. We're committed to make this program successful."

ProScience's Quality Control Group, along with researchers at its subsidiary VMRD in Pullman, WA, provide some of the clinical expertise for the ProStaph I™ quality assurance program. Outside scientists also audit the quality certification and manufacturing process at ProScience as part of this program.

"We view our quality assurance program as a team effort between ProScience and DHIA labs. It will also be enhanced by being part of the National DHIA Quality Certification program," Matsushita said.

Farm Forum

teen years I am obviously very interested in this issue. I can understand the interest this issue has stirred in an election year among segments of the agricultural community and state officials.

My primary reason for writing is to perhaps shed some light on a little different perspective on this issue. As a teacher of agriculture at Garden Spot High School for the past thirteen years, I have seen a lot of changes in agricultural education. Some of these changes have been positive in my opinion such as the broadening of the instruction to include far more than the traditional agricultural production and agricultural mechanics programs. However, many of the changes have negative consequences on our high school agricultural education programs throughout the state.

From my perspective the elimination of the $33,000 line item from Governor Casey's budget is insignificant when compared to the far greater problem of inadequate staffing at the state and regional levels of PDE.

Since I entered the profession in 1977 there have been significant changes in the availability of assistance from PDE in the areas of curriculum development, and developing a quality FFA program with supervised agricultural experiences being an integral part of the total agricultural education program. I had the advantage of having Mr. Henry Givler serve as the regional vocational consultant upon my entry into teaching. He was able to provide me with the kind of sound advice that only a person with experience in agricultural education could provide. At that time there were two full-time specialists in agricultural education in the state office and seven regional specialists — with agricultural background and expertise to assist us.

In contrast today we have basically a half-time person in the state office and a person with absolutely no FFA or agricultural education experience serving us as FFA coordinator in the vocational student organization office. Additionally there are three individuals designated in the regional offices to consult with agricultural education instructors and provide on sight assistance. Two of the regional staff members have some experience in agricultural education. However; in the western region, where the need appears to be the greatest for assistance, there is no one to assist the high school agriculture education instructor in a meaningful way. Even the individuals who have the expertise to be of assistance to the agriculture education instructor in the field are virtually unable to do so because their positions have evolved into that of generalist, expected to include all seven areas of vocational education.

Since 1980, forty-one agriculture education programs have been eliminated in the state, twenty-one of them were programs in the western region where there is a vacancy in the regional field office.

When I began in teaching I was able to get assistance from Henry Givler. He was able to answer specific questions about curriculum emphasis, FFA program development and other problems facing a new teacher. If I were to begin teaching agricultural education today, I would upon contacting the regional office for assistance find that I would be met with the prospect of having an individual who has no agricultural education or FFA background whatsoever attempt to advise me. I would find that I could expect little more than a cordial attempt to be supportive in a very general kind of way (in the absence of anything more substantive) and possibly to have some of my questions on funding answered by reading exerpts of the PDE policy manual to me.

This letter is not meant as an indictment of the Casey administration or our current agricultural education program specialist in the eastern regional field office. It is meant to shed some light on how far backwards we have moved in the past ten years in terms of support of agricultural education in this state. It seems to me that it wouldn't take a genius to figure out that since agriculture is the number one industry in the state that it would be both economically and politically prudent for leaders in both parties to make agricultural education a number one priority.

It will take far more committment than a $33,000 line item to get the job done. We need a far reaching and comprehensive plan to upgrade curriculum to meet the ever changing technological needs of agriculture education in our state and the staffing and funding to make it a reality. I sincerely hope that legislators on both sides of the aisle, our State Secretary of Agriculture, State Secretary of Education and Governor will utilize their leadership skills collectively to clearly identify this problem and have the courage to do something about it. The economic well-being of our state and the future of many of our finest young people may hang in the balance.

The American Oat Association would like us (taxpayers, the government) to subsidize the oat processing industry (Lancaster Farming, April 28 issue).

I submit that if oat processors need a reliable supply of oats, they should contract with growers for their needs. Surely there are people willing to grow oats if the price warrants.

Further, I would like to know who is "forcing" these processors to "build in foreign countries." Isn't it their own unwillingness to pay a livable price for oats that has caused this decline in production? Aren't they publicly waving the flag for American agriculture and going elsewhere because it's cheaper?

Lastly, I would like to say, I don't believe another excuse they like to use: "The consumer won't pay." Sure, there are limits, but I don't think they can't afford to pay more for oats. Stop by the markets sometime and check out the prices on these new products made with oat bran.

Several weeks ago you printed my original letter to Governor Casey concerning the staffing for agriculture education through the Pennsylvania Department of Education and the elimination of funding for our FFA Foundation from the state budget. As subsequent letters have pointed out, both items are of major concern to agriculture teachers, FFA members, and supporters of agriculture education in Pennsylvania.

As the number one industry in Pennsylvania, we feel agriculture and specifically agricultural education deserves the BIPARTISAN support of the Pennsylvania Departments of Education and Agriculture, Governor Casey, and the legislature.

The problems we face in agricultural education have not started with the Casey administration, but neither have they improved. If agricultural education in Pennsylvania is to provide relevant, dynamic, and progressive education for a constantly changing agriculture, all groups must work together.

Our agricultural education "family" has initiated a series of self-help projects during the last few years. We have begun the FFA Foundation in Pennsylvania to provide a broad base of industry support for our statewide activities. We have named three advisory committees through the Pennsylvania Department of Education - curriculum, ag literacy, and teacher preparation. At last summer's ag teachers' conference, we named a core curriculum committee which has donated their time to write a one year core curriculum with a science orientation for Pennsylvania. We are also currently planning a long range curriculum development plan. Several teachers have begun the process of developing new courses and teaching units in such areas as food science, hydroponics, and aquaculture and are sharing their novel experiences statewide. Our past-president's committee from the ag teachers association has developed a set of quality standards for agriculture programs in Pennsylvania.

All of these steps point to a revitalization of agricultural education in Pennsylvania. What is needed is vastly improved COMMUNICATIONS between all interested parties. I have had several misconceptions corrected through the letters you have printed and my correspondence with fellow teachers and others. I'm sure that members of the administration and legislature as well as your readers have also had misconceptions corrected.

It is time for all members of the agriculture "family" to sit down together and develop a plan which can utilize all available resources to insure that agriculture education in Pennsylvania not just survives, but again takes the forefront in producing leaders for tomorrow's agriculture.

Bulk Tank Testing

COLUMBUS, Ohio — ProScience has introduced an antibody testing program for ProStaph I™ designed for bulk tank milk (BTM) samples. The new BTM test will serve as a valuable tool to help dairy producers and veterinarians set up an effective Staph. aureus control program.

A paper presented at the 1990 National Mastitis Council (NMC) shows conventional culturing missed 53% of Staph. aureus herds. This research was conducted by Ruben Gonzales and Phillip Sears of Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. and ProScience Corporation.

The ProStaph I™ BTM test can be run with a regular ProStaph I™ assay of individual cows. The only difference is that BTM testing uses lower optical density readings. Based on the BTM test results, herds are categorized as Low Risk, Medium Risk, and High Risk for the presence of Staph. aureus.

In the same research presented at NMC, it appears that ProStaph I™ testing of BTM is very effective in detecting both low- and high-risk herds. The veterinarian or other advisor can then recommend the level of intensity for follow-up testing and corrective measures.

Other diagnostic tools such as culture and somatic cell count (SCC) testing can be used with ProStaph I™ on bulk tank milk to help in decisions concerning a Staph. aureus control program.

ProScience Corporation is performing extensive field research on how to implement this valuable new application for dairy producers and veterinarians. For more information about the new BTM testing program, contact ProScience at 800/658-8868.

PDPP Starts Cheers Program

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — This prom and graduation season, Pennsylvania's dairy farmers have joined the fight against teenage alcohol abuse by marketing a special non-alcoholic beverage program to high school students statewide.

"Over the last five years, more than 20,000 Pennsylvania teenagers have been involved in alcohol-related traffic accidents, many during the prom and graduation season," said PDPP chairman Donald Duncan. "Our Cheers program promotes milk-based beverages as a healthy and safe alternative to alcohol."

More than 50 Pennsylvania high schools are participating in the Cheers prom and graduation promotion by ordering free party packs that include supplies, decorations and recipes for milk-based punches.

Dairy farmers are also taking their case to the public through a satellite video news release. The Cheers video news release will be broadcast to television stations statewide May 11 and includes interview segments with Duncan, a representative from Mothers Against Drunk Driving and the dramatic story of one Pennsylvania teen whose life was drastically altered by drinking and driving.

The prom and graduation promotions mark the start of a year-long Cheers marketing campaign that will feature public service announcements, retail promotions and free collateral materials for restaurants serving Cheers beverages.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program was reorganized by state law in 1987 to give dairy farmers direct control of product marketing. The program is voluntarily supported by more than 4,000 dairy farmers statewide.

"Let's get involved in May 15 primary"

urges Bev Snyder

Ag Republican Bev Snyder, Venango county, is active in farm organizations and Western Pennsylvania politics.

How to keep Democrats squirming

Sure Pennsylvania Ag Republicans are partisan. For agriculture, for rural Pennsylvania.

But it's the most effective way to counter the equally partisan Big City Democrats who run Governor Casey and the state administration.

And its working. Let's keep the Democrats squirming. Join the Ag Republicans today. For details, write us at the address below.

The spring primaries are something like gardening. Here's where we hoe out the weeds and help along qualified candidates. Ones who will give agriculture a stronger voice in Harrisburg.

And we have a bumper crop to cultivate this spring. Still to be decided May 15 are the Republican nominees for governor, 25 state senate seats and 203 state representative spots.

Is it too late to get involved? Absolutely not. Call your favorite candidates. Find out how they stand on such things as Casey's cutback in ag research and neglect of farm youth programs.

Let them know that farmers and agribusiness people aren't sitting on the sidelines. We want to help. In the primary May 15. During the fall campaign.

Volunteer to hand out literature at the polls Tuesday. Or transport handicapped voters and senior citizens to the polls.

Don't discount the telephone. A brief call to neighbors election day could decide a tight race.

The May 15 primary is democracy in action. And you'll be the big winner by just getting involved.

MAMMA, ACME Cooperate To Promote Milk

TOWSON, Md.— Acme Markets has become the latest major retailer to authorize the use of milk price boards provided by the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA).

Acme Markets will be the single largest user of the boards in the mid-Atlantic area with the installation of the signs in 280 Acme stores throughout Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

"Thanks to a team approach involving not only MAMMA, but Lehigh Valley Dairies as well, we were successful in convincing Acme to use them," said MAMMA Marketing Director Bill Snitcher. "Even though it took an entire year to get the go-ahead, the results should be well worth the wait."

Acme Markets is to further support the program by investing their own funds to match the colors on the price boards with the colors used on Acme's different varieties of milk. They have also decided to hire an outside firm to install the boards rather than using their own employees.

"Together, the joint investment between MAMMA and Acme totals approximately $13,000 in behalf of area dairy farmers," Snitcher said.

Installation of the equipment should begin this month. In order to receive the boards, Acme had to agree to display them for at least one year. It is hoped they they will become a permanent addition to the stores, MAMMA officials said.

MAMMA's price boards have been placed in almost 800 supermarkets including Super Fresh, Thriftway, Basics, Valu Food, Santoni's, Farm Fresh, IGA, Clemens, Jay's, Karn's, and Food Lane.

ANNUAL FORAGES - ANOTHER LOOK

Some call them emergency forage crops. Others call them supplemental forage crops. In either case, they're referring to that group of warm season summer annuals (mainly grasses) that can be planted in late May and June and will produce an abundance of forage in as little as six to eight weeks. These warm weather annual crops are generally not ideal for hay, but among the annuals, there are crops that make excellent supplemental pasture, green crop or silage. And they are heat tolerant and very productive when moisture and fertility are adequate.

Here's a run-down on your choices for this year.

Multi-Harvest Annuals

Of the warm season summer annual grasses, the sudangrasses have the finest stems and are usually higher in digestibility than the sudan-sorghum hybrids at comparable stages of growth. However, they are usually lower yielding. Piper sudangrass is still the most widely grown variety. It is the lowest in prussic acid potential and is normally the choice for pasture. However, sudangrass can be made as hay if drying conditions are favorable.

Sudangrass hybrids produce somewhat more forage than Piper but also may have slightly greater prussic acid potential. However, this difference is small and with good management the sudangrass hybrids are fine for summer pasture as well as green crop and silage.

Sudangrass-sorghum hybrids, such as Beachley-Hardy's RS II, are usually much higher yielding than Piper and are used mostly in a green crop or silage situation. They have coarser stems and do have a higher prussic acid potential than Piper, and must be managed more carefully during the summer and fall.

These multi-harvest, warm season annual grasses can be planted in late May or June and will usually be ready for grazing or green crop about six to seven weeks after planting. They can be no-till seeded in stubble or sod, or drill planted on a prepared seedbed. In the absence of a soil test 50 to 75 pounds each of N, P_2O_5 and K_2O worked into the seedbed before planting is desirable. In general, seeding rates of 30-35 pounds per acre for the sudangrasses or 35-45 pounds per acre for the sudan-sorghum hybrids are adequate. If you plant a sudan-sorghum hybrid specifically for silage a mixture of soybeans (90 lbs. per acre) and the hybrid (25 lbs. per acre) can be used.

Piper sudangrass can be grazed when it reaches a height of 18" with no danger of prussic acid -- a two-foot height is recommended for sudangrass hybrids. If properly fertilized and managed these crops can normally be grazed two or three times during the growing season. The sudan-sorghum hybrids should reach a height of 2½ -3 feet before grazing or chopping. At earlier stages, the forage will be higher in quality but may contain unsafe levels of prussic acid. If cut at a stubble height of five to six inches they will recover rapidly for a second crop.

If harvested for direct-cut silage these crops should be allowed to reach the early head to early bloom stage of growth. If harvested for silage at more immature stages wilting is desirable. While hay made from these crops harvested at the more immature stage is fair to good in quality, field curing can be a serious problem; thus the use of a hay conditioner is essential.

Sudangrass is generally superior to the millets except on cold, poorly drained soils where Japanese Millet seeded at the rate of 15 pounds per acre is occasionally used for pasture, green chop or hay. This millet, however, produces little or no aftermath growth.

One Cut Annuals

The drought and heat tolerant forage sorghums grown alone or with soybeans can be grown for silage in place of corn. Under favorable growing conditions adapted corn hybrids harvested as silage are said to yield slightly more feed per acre. However, the sorghums are more drought resistant and less subject to damage from deer where deer feeding on corn is a problem. When grown alone, row plant at the rate of 8 to 12 pounds per acre. Fertilize as for corn. If grown with soybeans use 90 pounds per acre of beans and 6 to 8 pounds of sorghum. Harvest for silage when the sorghum is in the soft to medium dough stage of growth.

It's too early to predict the moisture conditions for this summer. Thus planting some acreages to a summer annual could be a good hedge against the unknown.

Contest Tests Skills

DES MOINES, Iowa — Pork producers can try their hand at evaluating a hog's fat thickness and muscling by participating in the Lean Value Contest sponsored by "Hogs Today" magazine during World Pork Expo June 2-4 at the Iowa State Fairgrounds.

Live hogs will be available for participants to judge from 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. each day of the Expo in the Varied Industries Building. The Lean Value Contest gives adults and youth the opportunity to test their skills in ranking hogs for lean muscle traits.

The person who comes the closest to the actual backfat thickness and loin-eye area from all the animals will win a new pickup truck, compliments of Purina Mills, Inc. Other prizes and their sponsors in the adult division are a manure tanker, Balzer Manufacturing Corporation; a Caribbean cruise, Smith-Kline Animal Health; a 100 foot flex auger system, Chore-Time Equipment Company; aluminum livestock gates, Sands Livestock Systems; and additional prizes, Walnut Grove.

Youth 18 years old and younger also can test their livestock evaluation skills and compete for 10 cash prizes that will be sponsored by Monsanto Agricultural Company. The first-prize winner in the youth division will be awarded $500.

The results of the Lean Value Contest will be computed after the Expo, and the winners will be notified of their prizes.

Better Dairy Income Promotes Farmland Preservation

Farmers, especially dairy farmers, stay on the land and farm it as long as their income exceeds their expenses. This is a simple formula for achieving farm preservation, a situation desired by so many now, particularly non-farm people.

Yet this "simple" formula for farmland preservation is not independent of the total market economy of the state, the country and the international market. Non-farm people outnumber farm people in the United States, and their interest in cheaper food prices influences policymakers more strongly than the demands of farm people for a better income. Current policy debates in Washington actually include reducing the price the farmer gets paid for milk. This, ironically, militates against the efforts of farm preservation through better farm income.

Actually, better income really means better net income, which comes from more than one direction. Since dairy farmers have little if any, influence over the price of milk they receive per 100 lb., they can only choose to receive it as wholesale, or better, as retail. Most dairy farmers have shied away from this, because they'd rather work with the cows and fields than with people at the retail level.

If the milk price per 100 lb. is fixed, what are other income options? One option is to add more cows. Many farmers have chosen this course. However, while more dairy cows produce more milk income, they also create greater expenses in feeding, breeding and keeping them healthy. So, what else can farmers do: Make the existing number of cows produce more milk per cow. Many farmers have succeeded in this direction in the last 30 years. Much of my work at the Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station and in DHIA has included this objective. But again, though more milk per cow means more milk income, it also means greater feed expenses, veterinary care costs and replacement costs. Neither option is a "simple" formula for more net income, nor do they achieve much progress towards dairy farm preservation.

By definition, net income is the difference between gross income and expenses. Okay, then, if increasing the gross income is not a strong solution, then how about decreasing expenses. Which ones, you ask? Feed? Yes, it makes up half of all milk production costs. Do you have a personal computer, or access to one through an adviser, which can track "least-cost" feed ration changes monthly or biweeky? A lot of cash expenses can be saved by feeding the same daily pounds of energy, protein, fiber, calcium, phosphorus, bypass protein, fat, etc., from a different group of feeds and from a different combination with farm-grown forages and grains.

In addition to "least-cost ration" feed cost savings, a personal computer can also take over individual feeding of cows through the transponder identity control of individual cows. The investments are small compared to the enormous improvements in income above feed costs realized in only two years, as we have found at the University of Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station. Group feeding of cows, though better than none at all in loose-housing systems, is wasting money compared to computerized individual cow feeding in loose-housing systems.

Farm-grown forage use is another underappreciated option. In recent years an increased amount of forage rye, oats, wheat, barley and vetch grown in the mid-Atlantic region has been used for dairy cows. They are also used as fall and spring supplementary pasture or haylage in wrapped large bales or in air-controlled silos, or as silage and as hay. This has effectively become a "less" or "least"-cost dairy ration without lowering production. Amazingly, in this region, forage rape, brassica or canola has not become popular, while in continental Europe these are valuable supplemental dairy forages.

Another option, the wrapper of big bales with or without ammonia, is an inexpensive and powerful alternative to expensive silos for haylage, and for haymaking. Labor costs are low compared to traditional small hay baling. Thus, "least-cost" and individual cow feeding computer programs, forages and new wrapping machinery can really lower expenses and increase net income.

What other costs can be lowered? Housing? Not really, unless you change from stanchions to loose housing in this region, or move to Florida! Veterinary? Not too much can be saved in medicines or pesticides unless you shift to organic farming. However, one big option remains for too many farmers: loan and mortgage payments. The solution for too many farmers is to sell all cows and start over again from heifers. Will the farmer actually start over again? Probably only if the farmer can see prospects for a clear positive net income, otherwise another dairy farm is sold and lost to housing developers.

The future for farm preservation, at least the dairy way, must focus on how to make a better net income on the farm now and strengthen policy supporting this idea. The next generation of farm youngsters will not mind taking over the farm if they see a future for themselves. Farmland is then preserved and probably more green space, too, because more pastures and more hay crops also mean fewer dairy expenses.

One final thought on policies for farmland preservation: why do Americans who are company or government employees get pensions, as do dairy farmers in serveral European countries, while American farmers have none? A farmer with a reasonable retirement pension does not have to sell his farm to cover his old-age financial needs. This is an ideal solution to farmland preservation questions.

1990 BARN PAINTING
Latest Developments
1. PREPARATION - High volume water blasting at 1,000 lb. pressure re-surfaces barn siding into a smooth (like new) appearance!
   a. Performed by professionals quickly at reasonable cost.
   b. By yourself with your own or rented equipment.
   c. Or other more conventional methods.
2. APPLICATION - To insure better adherence to this super prepared surface, use the best fine bristle brush in four directions to evenly distribute the recommended mil thickness of seal coat coverage.
3. SPECIALIZATION - Every barn is different but generally it's best to use a high quality mildew resistant product, specially formulated to meet the requirements of this partially weathered wood that was and will be weather stressed.
4. WARNING - The modified oil latex is less effective as a wood preserver and actually increases nail & metal deterioration. Deal with home people. At their rates, I could double mine.

Tewksbury Opinion On Dairy Farm Bill

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — After making several trips to Washington D.C. this spring in an attempt to convince members of Congress of the dire need for them to pass a realistic 1990 Farm Bill, I am now starting to sympathize with our legislators as they try to sift through all of the recommendations being presented to them by various organizations and the present administration.

I have been working with members of Congress since 1960 in an effort to improve economic conditions on our family farm. Many times during those years we have seen various degrees of diversified opinions among farm groups, but I can honestly say I have never before seen so many unrealistic, screwy ideas being presented to Congress as we are witnessing at the present time.

We have heard representatives of Land-O-Lakes say a milk support price of $10.10 per cwt. is sufficient. Many members of Congress have told us that Farm Bureau and the Pennsylvania Farmers Association had just been in town and were reporting to the legislators that conditions in the country were pretty good and they advised several members of Congress only to make minor changes in the 1985 Farm Bill.

Many other undesirable remarks have been made, but to me the real clincher was when I read the remarks made by the president of one of the larger milk co-ops located in the Northeast. His remark was that in the future, milk prices paid to dairy farmers will not be tied to the parity formula or to the cost of producing milk, but dairy farmers prices will reflect market conditions.

If area dairy farmers want language in the 1990 Farm Bill that will enable them to cover the average cost of production plus a reasonable profit, then you as a dairy farmer must act now and act vigorously. You must immediately bombard members of Congress with a barrage of phone calls and DEMAND the 1990 Farm Bill completely stays away from further price cuts. You must tell Congress that you want a two-tier pricing program UP FRONT, a program that will cover the average cost of production plus a reasonable profit. YOU must make those calls TODAY.

The full House Agriculture Committee will probably consider the dairy provisions of the Farm Bill starting the week of May 14th.

Remember, there are many people in Washington and out in the country that feel farm milk prices must go LOWER.

Mr. Dairy Farmer, you are the only one that can prevent the undesirable dairy policy that dairy farmers will be saddled with for the next five years. You must let your Congressman know immediately that you need a dairy policy which will return to you a price that you received during the end of 1989 and early 1990.

We have been saying for years that the marketplace would sustain higher milk prices for dairy farmers. Finally, this argument was proven true during the last half of 1989 and early 1990. I really believe the majority of consumers will buy milk at $2.60 per gallon if they know dairy farmers are receiving the price increase.

Our problem is to develop a program that will return prices to dairy farms comparable to the prices of 1989-90. I feel such a program is available and I feel the majority of dairy farmers support this program.

Farmers Union has been working with several farm organizations and many members of Congress and this is the program that will return to dairy farmers an equitable price for their efforts.

One thing is certain in Washington today. Any farm bill must meet the restraints of the Federal budget. While we feel the U.S. Agricultural budget is receiving a disproportionate reduction compared to other Federal programs: The inevitable is-- we will probably have to learn to live with the cuts.

Probably the best deal we have in town is the $725 million allotment for the dairy programs being proposed by the Senate for each of the next five years.

There are still many other unknowns. Some people are proposing the Government be responsible for the first Seven Billion pounds of reserve milk. After seven billion pounds is purchased, then milk purchased after those pounds would be charged to producers. However, at this point we have to plan our programs with the knowns.

This means a milk support price set at $13.60 per cwt. could be accomplished and still meet the restraints of the budget.

If the support price was set at $13.10 per cwt. instead of $13.60 then the cost of the program would be $40 million dollars less with a total cost of $680 million dollars.

Some people will argue a support price in the $13.00 bracket is too high. Remember during the last part of 1989 and January of 1990 milk processors were paying much more than $13.00 per cwt. for manufactured milk. Only the government was buying the products at a lower cost via the support price program.

The decision will be made by you dairy farmers. If you contact your Congressman today you can help prevent further losses to dairy farmers. Failing to act will only give ammunition to the people who are willing to lower the support price to $8.60 by 1993.

Do you want to produce for the needs of the market and receive a realistic price, $15.50-$16.00) or, do you want wide open production with one guarantee - further price cuts.

The decision is yours.-- Arden Tewksbury, PA Farmers Union.

Bucks Co. Still Seeks Dairy Princess Candidates

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.) — The Bucks County Dairy Promotion Committee is still seeking candidates to compete for the title of 1990 Bucks County Dairy Princess.

Any single young woman, between 16 and 24 years of age, whose parents or guardians are or have been engaged in dairy farming within the last five years is eligible to compete.

A young woman is also eligible if she herself owns at least two dairy animals in a bona fide 4-H or FFA program, or is a dairy farm employee, or is a daughter of a dairy industry employee.

The Bucks County Dairy Princess Pageant is scheduled for June 23 at Delaware Valley College in Doylestown.

The winner of the contest will devote a year to promoting the dairy industry in the county. She also will be eligible to compete for the title of Pennsylvania Dairy Princess during the state pageant in September.

To acquaint current candidates with the opportunities of being a dairy princess, the promotion committee sponsored a social on May 9 at 7:30 p.m. at the Bucks County Extension Office, located at the intersection of Route 611 and Almshouse Road in Doylestown.

Committee members and former dairy princesses explained what the program entails and the benefits involved. Among these are appearances at schools, malls, county fairs and grocery stores and the opportunity to speak to civic clubs, senior citizen groups, and farm and non-farm audiences.

Young women interested in learning more about the contest should contact Laura England, Bucks County Dairy Promotion Committee chairman, at (215) 322-0200.

Motherhood Doesn't Always Come Naturally

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.)—Mothers. Not a single one of us would be here without one of them.

So, for the past several decades, the second Sunday of May has been set aside as a day to remember and honor our mothers. It's a day on which nationwide phone networks hum with calls, restaurants prepare for waiting lines of customers, and mothers are remembered with cards, candy, flowers and hugs.

Motherhood for most women comes as a matter of natural course, a part of womanhood, love and marriage. But, for some it's not that simple.

"You think you're going to grow up, get married, have children. Then you find out it doesn't necessarily work out like that. And, instead, you have to work at making it work out."

Those are the words of a Pennsylvania farm woman. She says them with a sort of catch in her throat and longing in her voice. Though insisting she remain anonymous, she agreed to lay open her deepest feelings, frustrations and the jumble of emotions faced every day by a woman who, through a quirk of fate, has faced difficulty attaining what a majority of women take for granted -- motherhood.

Married for a decade, A. (for Anonymous) came from a large farm family. Even before marriage, she knew that she wanted to have several children. Since both she and her farmer fiance were older than many couples when they decided to marry, they both underwent fertility testing. And, while those tests showed some minor, but treatable, problems, physicians found no real barriers that were expected to prevent their ability to have children.

After several years of marriage and still childless, they sought help for their inability to conceive. What they found was the then still fairly-experimental technology known as in-vitro, or "test tube," fertilization. Success rate for in-vitro pregnancies in the mid-1980s was fairly low, about 16 percent.

An in-vitro pregnancy, with literally dozens of tests, surgery, hospital visits daily for weeks at a time, and endless injections, multiplies by several times the normal medical costs involved in childbirth.

"I was working where insurance would cover most of the in-vitro costs, so we decided to try it," says A. Soon doctors told her she would have twins.

The couple's ecstatic anticipation of two babies was short-lived; she lost one of the twin embryos within a few weeks. But the remaining one was healthy, and the couple became the parents of a baby girl.

Delighted with the success of in-vitro and their baby daughter, they again began the lengthy in-vitro process. That attempt was not successful -- nor were several more. With insurance paid out almost to the maximum allowable, plus spending thousands of dollars of their own, A. is trying to cope with the possibility of mothering no more natural children.

"Every time you go through in-vitro it's like being on an emotional rollercoaster. It doesn't seem possible, with the technology available today, that someone cannot get pregnant," she sighs. "No matter what age you are, I think you must go through the same emotions when you want children so badly."

What spurs her on to try almost anything -- "I got 66 needles at one sitting during one in-vitro session" -- is that she desperately wants more children, and especially feels a desire to give her husband a son.

It's a hope of great intensity, with reasons that are buried deep within her own feelings and the rural tradition of farm families passing land down from father to son.

"I'm not under any pressure from my husband; I just don't feel complete. I know that sounds selfish because we have a beautiful daughter that we love so much. But my life just doesn't feel complete and I'm not sure at what point I'll feel that it is.

"Sometimes I think I'm in control and then something happens to bring it all rushing back. At some point I may feel ready to just give it up, but I don't know when that may be.

"I'm sure farm families will understand that I'd like a son. It's just one of my hopes for my husband," she confides.

Well-intentioned, but unknowing, friends only added to the emotional frustration with comments about starting a family or having more children.

About five years ago, the couple began looking into adoption possibilities.

"First thing that happens is that you are put on a waiting list wherever you apply. And, if you're on some sort of fertility program, you're told to call the agency if you become pregnant.

"We were on the waiting list for three years. After I got pregnant, we had to reapply and start all over on the waiting list."

Another agency "guaranteed" a baby in a year if they were "approved."

"What they didn't tell us right away was that we would have to go on a list to become 'approved,' and just getting on the list would cost $2,000. It took a whole year to even get them to send an application; they kept saying they were re-doing their applications. And a total cost to adopt a baby through that program was between $22,000 and $30,000."

According to A., normal adoption procedures require the adopting parents to pay all legal and medical costs involved, but which may be much less with one agency than with another.

"I keep thinking if I put all sorts of 'feelers' out, then something will happen," says a hopeful A. That means having tried newspaper ads, letters to doctors, even looking into the possibility of a surrogate-mother arrangement. "I've even considered calling ads run by other people, just to see if they ever got any results." Adoption possibilities of both older and foreign children have also been considered.

Dr. Vincent Berger, phsychologist for Adoption Services in Camp Hill, said their waiting list for adoptions is three to four years. He adds that some agencies have waiting lists as high as 10 to 12 years.

Adoption Services places mostly Caucasion, and occasionally biracial, babies. Birthmother services are provided, and they are given extensive counseling to make certain that they wish to proceed with adoption.

For some, motherhood doesn't come naturally.

Pennsylvania law allows both agency and private adoptions, Dr. Berger explains. Agency adoptions are through non-profit organizations, such as the one he represents, while private adoptions are "everything else." That includes adoptions arranged through attorneys, physicians, or just "someone who knew someone, who knew someone."

He adds that most agencies provide a foster-parenting period for adoptive babies, from two to six months after birth, in which time the birthmother can terminate the procedure. Others like Adoption Services use "legal risk adoptions," in which the newborn is placed directly with the potential adopting family, offering a bonding period. The legal risk to the adoptive parents, however, is that the birthmother does have a period of time in which to terminate the adoption.

"Every time you go through in-vitro it's like being on an emotional rollercoaster. It doesn't seem possible, with the technology available today, that someone cannot get pregnant," she sighs. "No matter what age you are, I think you must go through the same emotions when you want children so badly."

For some, this baby's smile brings pain to their hearts—because they do not have a baby to call their own.

Cost, according to Dr. Berger, may vary greatly depending on the adoption route taken, ranging anywhere from $2,000 to $15,000. He knew of none in the immediate area who charged up-front fees.

Another adoption agency listed in area phone books, Adoption With Love, replied when contacted that they preferred not to talk with newspapers. A spokeswoman gave New England as their location.

Recently, A. and her husband have begun giving serious consideration to applying for the foster-parent program. Would-be foster parents are screened on requirements similar to those for adoption -- personal interviews, training classes, assessments of housing facilities, meeting fire codes and space requirements, background checks for child abuse and police clearance.

To fill their desire for lots of children, A. baby-sits several youngsters and includes young friends and relatives in their daily and special activities.

"Sometimes just looking at our child, or at families doing things together, brings the emotions all rushing back. Sometimes I can talk about it, but other days it's really difficult. I've heard that as many as one-third of marriages have problems with being childless; who knows why it has to be that way.

"I just want other people to think about the emotions of wanting children and not being able to have them."

Homestead Notes

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Every day is Mother's day on a dairy farm.

Or at least it seems that way.

That's because our livelihood, our economic status, our very moment-to-moment way of life revolves around the continuing cycle of motherhood.

For a cow to produce milk, she must deliver a calf. To have that calf, she has to be bred, either artificially, or via the more danger-fraught method of keeping a bull around. To reproduce she must be healthy, get her exercise, avoid stress, and consume large volumes of tasty foodstuffs in proper balance of TDN (total digestible nutrients), fiber, fats, vitamins, minerals and all that good stuff.

Making sure this all happens as it should entails regular periodic herd reproductive and health checkups, plus occasional emergency calls, by your friendly local large-animal-practice veterinarian, nutritionist, feed consultants, supply personnel, extension experts and a whole retinue of support people. That further entails barn builders, equipment suppliers, truckers, equipment people, seed companies, fertilizer firms, and on and on.

To say nothing of the twice (someplaces, thrice) daily "middleman," the person or persons who connect the milking equipment to the cow, transferring the white lifeblood of motherhood from the cow's production output unit to an automatically cooled tank.

And not to forget all those folks that handle, process and market it after it leaves the milk house.

This motherhood stuff sure keeps a lot of people busy.

But all mothers need a break, a rest period, a little vacation time. We send ours to the dry cow "rest farm" over the hill and down the road a piece, where expectant mothers go to condition their bodies for delivery and await their blessed events.

There they can lounge their days away in the pasture or on the straw bedding of the barn, soak up sunshine and nibble grass, hay and silage. No schedule, no structure.

But are they happy in this environment of all play and no work?

Apparently not. Every few days, or at least recently, these vacationing mothers make a break for greener pastures beyond the "rest farm." They miss their family, they miss their friends, they miss their work.

Actually what they miss most are hearty scoops of high-protein dairy ration feed, a necessity for our milking mothers, but forbidden, fattening food on the conditioning diet for dry cows.

Occasionally our mothers-to-be put on a protest march against their restrictive impending-motherhood diets, and make a break to stampede the quarter-mile back home to the dairy barn. Or they just go off their diets and chomp up whatever they can find in the closest fields.

Sometimes they apparently run off for the sheer excitement of it, like a recent rainy evening we arrived home just after dark to find the house surrounded by 20-plus expectant mothers. We suspect their plan had been to hold us captive inside and bargain for extra rations of sweet feed — a strict no-no on their dry-cow diets.

They turned tail and made tracks when we arrived on the scene. As you may have figured, the tracks remain all over the lawn, along with a few other souvenirs of their aborted hostage attempt.

But the transgressions of the marauding mothers-to-be are forgiven and forgotten as the everyday miracle of birth begins the cycle again. Even after a quarter-century of delivering and caring for these four-legged babies and their mothers, we still take great joy and satisfaction in a warm, wet newborn calf lifting a wobbly head.

Motherhood. It really is a miracle.

Seems fitting that, at least once a year, we pause to pay tribute to that.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

When you're busy getting ready for graduations, showers, garage sales and other spring events, there's not much time to cook a meal. Your microwave and a pound of ground meat can help.

Many favorite recipes start by precooking a pound of ground beef or other ground meat, such as ground turkey, ground pork, and ground bulk seasoned pork sausage. Try using your microwave instead of a skillet on the range top. You'll be surprised at how convenient it is.

Microwave times and directions are about the same for all kinds of ground meat or poultry. Use High power. Microwave about five minutes per pound. Time varies because of differences in microwave ovens and differences in temperature and amount of fat in ground meats.

Use a waxed-paper or paper-towel cover or any other loose cover, such as a paper plate or casserole lid set off-side. These types of covers allow extra moisture to escape, yet hold in some heat and promote even cooking.

Stir several times during cooking to break up chunks and ensure even doneness.

Drain some meats. Leanness of the ground meat determines if fat should be drained or not. With extra-lean ground beef, lean ground pork, or ground turkey, the small amount of fat and juices adds flavor to the meat, and so are usually not discarded. You may want to precook regular ground beef or pork sausage in a microwave steamer basket with small holes, a microwave-safe colander, or a special accessory called a Ground Beef Cooker (a clear, microwave-safe, plastic pie-plate-shaped dish with holes in the bottom to let fat drip through). All allow fat to drip away as meat cooks.

Ground beef labeled "lean" (about 77 percent to 81 percent lean) is best for microwaving. With regular ground beef, sometimes labeled hamburger (about 70 percent to 76 percent lean), there is fat to drain and more shrinkage. Extra-lean ground beef (about 82 percent to 86 percent lean) is more expensive, but is fine for casseroles, chill or other combinations.

Ground pork is at least 70 percent lean and contains no seasonings. Usually it's sold fresh in the meat counter. Fresh pork sausage is seasoned, but not cured or smoked. It contains at least 50 percent lean, but often is leaner. (Check package labels.) Look for it in the meat and frozen foods sections.

Ground turkey or ground chicken is found fresh in large supermarkets or frozen in smaller stores. Microwaved ground poultry can get a "boiled" taste, yet a dried-out texture. To prevent this, add seasonings before cooking and cover with a paper towel during cooking. Microwave until poultry is no longer pink. Avoid overcooking, but, for safety, cook to well-done.

Ground poultry can toughen and form a firm, dry lump during cooking. To prevent this, crumble it into cooking dish and stir with a fork several times during cooking to break up pieces. Add seasonings to it before cooking to help it flavor through. Do not drain to retain flavor.

Using ground turkey to make Turkey Salad Sandwiches is a healthy, convenient choice when you don't have turkey leftovers. It's a good low-sodium alternative to canned turkey, which usually has salt added. And, it's a welcome substitute for fresh turkey pieces since it eliminates the bother of slow cooking, boning and chopping.

Taco Spoon Pie is a new creation of mine. It's an easy way to bring a special-looking dish to the table. It looks like a taco pie that took an hour or so to bake. In fact, it only takes about eight minutes to cook. Instead of slicing it in wedges to serve, let the people help themselves, spooning the mixture into tacos or tortillas.

Turkey Salad Sandwiches

1-1¼ pounds ground fresh turkey
½ cup finely chopped onion
¾ teaspoon ground poultry seasoning
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup sweet pickle relish or chutney
4-6 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing
Salt and pepper (optional)
6 buttered rolls or 12 bread slices
Lettuce

Crumble ground turkey into microwave-safe 2-quart casserole. With a fork, stir in onion and poultry seasoning; cover with a paper towel. Microwave (High) 4 to 5 minutes, stirring with a fork and breaking up chunks after each 2 minutes. Cook until turkey is no longer pink. Stir well. Refrigerate until well chilled.

Stir together cold cooked ground turkey, celery, relish and mayonnaise. Season to taste with salt and pepper, if desired. Spread mixture on 6 rolls or on 6 slices of bread; top with lettuce and roll tops of remaining slices of bread. Mixture keeps refrigerated for 2 days. Makes 6 sandwiches.

Hint: Stir thoroughly at times indicated. Check to be sure turkey is cooked until well-done by stirring after cooking and looking to see that no pinkness remains.

Each serving: 325 calories, 22g protein, 15g fat, 23g carbohydrate, 374mg sodium, 58mg cholesterol.

Taco Spoon Pie

1 pound lean ground beef
1 medium onion, chopped
¼ cup ketchup
1 teaspoon chili powder
½ teaspoon garlic powder
Salt and pepper (optional)
1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
Taco shells or tortillas
Chopped onion
Thinly sliced lettuce
Diced tomato
Sliced black olives

Place ground beef in a microwave-safe 9- to 10-inch pie plate, forming a doughnut shape; sprinkle with onion and cover with waxed paper. Microwave (High) 4 to 5 minutes, stirring with a fork at least once during cooking to break up beef. Drain. Stir in ketchup, chili powder, garlic powder, and salt and pepper, if used. Re-cover and microwave (High) 2 to 3 minutes or until hot. Spread mixture evenly over pie plate; sprinkle with cheese and re-cover. Microwave on Medium (50 percent power, 325-350 watts) 1 minute or until cheese starts to melt. To serve, spoon into taco shells or tortillas. Top with remaining ingredients, as desired. Makes 5 servings.

Each serving: 453 calories, 25g protein, 28g fat, 24g carbohydrate, 564mg sodium, 81mg cholesterol.

Summer Dairy Promotion Features Ice Cream

CEDAR KNOLLS, NJ — The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council (ADADC) will team up with Nabisco this summer in a special promotion featuring ice cream and cookies.

Recent research indicates that consumers often run out of ice cream a week before they repurchase it.

In response to this research, ADADC's goal is to encourage consumers to "double up" their ice cream purchases. The nationwide promotion features television advertising, newspaper inserts and supermarket displays.

A special two-week television ad sponsored by the National Dairy Board will run during early July. There will also be a coupon insert in the July 15 edition of newspapers. A total of $9.2 million will be spent on the total promotion.

Ice cream promotion materials will appear at the freezer case as well as end-aisle displays. An in-store, mail-in coupon will provide consumers with a $2 coupon for their next ice cream purchase. To qualify, consumers must mail in proofs-of-purchase from a half-gallon of ice cream and two packages of Nabisco cookies.

ADADC will place the retail effort with local supermarket chains. Over 2,000 stores in ADADC's region are expected to participate.

TAKING TIME

by Rebecca Wolf

Extension Home Economist

In June, school children will be dismissed for summer vacation. Knowing this, many parents are scurrying around, bargaining with friends, relatives, and neighbors--panicked that they will be unable to find summer care for their children.

More than 5-million American school children are labeled as "latchkey kids". These children return after classes to an empty home for part of the afternoon. When summer arrives, these children are faced with being unattended not for a few hours but for an entire day.

Other children may seem responsible enough to take care of themselves for one or two hours, but a whole day without supervision may be risky. And so as spring turns to summer, parents search for safe, enjoyable places that provide school-age child care.

Fortunately in many areas, community groups provide day time programs for school children. If you are a parent, investigate local playground, day camp, Girls' and Boys' Clubs, and YM/YWCA programs.

But first, think carefully about your needs and your child's needs. How much supervision does your son require? Would he be able to stay at home with a next door neighbor checking on him each day? How much can you afford? Does your toddler's day care provider accept school childfren during the summer months?

If you think your daughter is independent enough to care for herself during the day (or if you think an older child will be able to give her adequate help), you need to take a few evenings to help her prepare for his time.

Many parents fear kidnapping and other "outsider" threats to their children's safety. But home accidents and fires account for far more injuries and deaths among children. Both types of situations should be discussed. With your child, PRACTICE what to do when there's a fire at home, how to answer the phone and door without letting anyone know that he or she is alone, how to get help in an emergency and simply how to deal with boredom, loneliness, and fear.

Check the local phone directory for hotlines for kids. Your town may have an organization that provides a listening ear for lonely, frightened kids.

Why not create an "I'm Bored" bag? This is an excellent tool for a child who will be alone. Take a brown paper lunch bag and ask your child to decorate it with his or her name and pictures. Then cut ten pieces of paper. On each slip, your child should write one thing he or she likes to do (shoot basketball, read, play with the cat, put together a puzzle). Cut five more pieces of paper. On those write his or her chores or contributions to the home (make the bed, feed the dog, take out the trash).

Then each time your child's bored, draw a slip from the bag. He or she has the privilege of not doing the first suggestion and may choose another slip. BUT he or she must do the next one. This is a way to give your child some independence.

If you decide your child is not mature enough to be by himself, you need to take time to select a quality provider to care for him. In our area, referral agencies may be able to help you with this task for a fee. A more informal referral network exists in the area, too. Just ask your neighbors, coworkers, other parents in your PTA group about the options they know.

Visit and speak personally with every potential provider. If possible, have your child come along with you. School children will be able to tell you if the setting and person is someone they would be comfortable with.

Be sure to ask questions about payment. Do you have to pay for the week your family is on vacation? Will there be additional costs for day trips to museums, parks, and the pool? Will the provider care for children of a variety of ages or just school-age kids? How do you feel about that? Will you need to adjust your work schedule in order to pick up your child at this location?

Ask about the provider's plans for the child's time. A school-age child does not need constant supervision. Children should be able to play outside, to choose some activities for quiet times. They need to be developing the abilities to make choices and entertain themselves.

Be sure you know what your family budget can afford. You may need to investigate ways to swap services. Could you babysit in the evenings for a friend who watches your daughter several days each week?

This whole process takes time. Start now. Plan to put as much effort, if not more, into finding quality care as you would into purchasing a new car. Your child deserves the best option available to you.

- a Swiss and Muenster Burger on rye bread.
- a Brick and Colby Burger on a whole wheat roll.
- a Blue and Cheddar Burger on an onion roll.
- a Mozzarella and Monterey Jack Burger on Italian bread.

Sizzle Up Special Memories Of Mom's Favorite Dish

Well, Mom, you've made it through another year. Another year of getting up in the morning and making breakfast for Dad and the kids; of working in the barn or office then preparing lunch and dinner. Another year of washing the dishes, cleaning the house, doing the laundry, and taking care of the sick, and always being there for the child in need.

You probably don't always feel loved and appreciated. Maybe you feel your teen agers don't remember anything that you taught them. But one thing you can count on, they remember the good meals you've cooked. And when it's the kids turn to be parents, they search for recipes like Mom used to make.

Today's column is dedicated to Mom's favorite recipe — chances are, it was her mom's favorite recipe also. And for generations, these recipes will be passed down to the children who will recall memories of mother's cooking and all the hard work that went into being a mother.

Happy Mother's Day!

GRANDMA TALBERT'S CHOCOLATE MARSHMALLOW COOKIES

1¾ cup flour
½ cup shortening
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 egg
½ cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla
Marshmallows

Mix together all ingredients except marshmallows. Drop by tablespoon on cookie sheet and bake at 350 degrees for 12 minutes. Place half of a large marshmallow on each cookie. Put back in the oven until marshmallow is slightly melted. Watch! When cool, frost with the following ingredients that have been mixed well:

2 cups confectioners' sugar
3 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt
5 tablespoons cocoa
4 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon vanilla

SPANISH CREAM

1 tablespoon plain gelatin
3 cups milk
½ cup sugar
3 eggs, separated
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Soak gelatin in cold milk for 10 minutes. Add sugar and salt. Stir until dissolved. Heat in top of double boiler until milk is scalded. Beat egg yolks slightly and gradually add ½ cup hot milk.

Stir mixture into remaining milk and cook until slightly thickened, about 4 minutes. Stir constantly. Remove from heat and cool slightly. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and vanilla. Turn into molds and chill until firm. Serves 8.

Sweeten with honey (Psalms 19:10)

Season with salt (Colossians 4:6)

Add one tiny grain of mustard seed (Mark 4:31)

Combine ingredients and mix. If mixture becomes too firm, add a little milk (I Corinthians 3:2). Do not add any leavening, a little leavening will leaven the whole lump (I Corinthians 5:6). Pour mixture into vessels of silver and gold (II Timothy 2:10).

Bake over heat made by coals of fire (Romans 12:20).

Serve at once, but don't let stand alone (Hebrews 4:7). If this fruit cake should make you thirsty, drink water freely (Revelation 22:17).

MOM'S DATE CAKE

4 cups pitted, chopped dates
1½ teaspoon baking soda
2 cups boiling water
1 cup butter or margarine
2 cups sugar
3 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla
3 cups flour
1 cup chopped English walnuts

Mix dates and soda in small bowl. Pour on boiling water and mix well. Let stand while mixing other ingredients. Cream butter and sugar; add eggs and vanilla. Beat well. Add flour and nuts a little at a time, mixing well after each addition. Add dates and mix well. Turn into one greased and floured angel food pan or two loaf pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 to 60 minutes.

Contributor writes: "This cake is a moist, dark cake — delicious spread with butter or cream cheese. My mother would bake dozens of these at Christmas in small ring mold pans that my father had specially made for her. My brother and I would then give them to teachers, Sunday school teachers and others as gifts. Mom still bakes a large batch of them each holiday season and even though I work fulltime plus help my husband in our part-time photography studio, I always make sure I have time to bake several as gifts — and to enjoy ourselves. It wouldn't be Christmas without them!"

ANSWER — Joan Young, Lititz, requested a linguine salad recipe. Thanks to Joan Smith, Scottdale, and to Josephine Matenus, Dallas, for answering.

Mom's Linguine And Vegetables

1 onion, sliced
1 green pepper, sliced
3 garlic cloves, sliced
3 tablespoons virgin olive oil
2 teaspoons butter
1 to 2 bunches broccoli florets
1 bunch kale, optional
1 large head cauliflower florets
2 large cans tomatoes, halves or stewed
1 container fresh mushrooms, sliced
2 tablespoons soy sauce
Oregano, to taste
Mozzarella cheese, grated
1 pound linguine

Boil pasta in water. Heat oil and butter in large wok. When butter is melted, pan is hot enough to put in kale. Cover and saute until limp. Put in onion, pepper, and garlic. Saute until onions are clear. Add broccoli, tomatoes, cauliflower, soy sauce and oregano. Cook. Cover until vegetables are tender-crisp, add mushrooms. Stir and cover. Reduce heat and cook until desired texture.

Place cooked pasta on plate. Spoon sauce with vegetables on top. Sprinkle with grated cheese.

Asparagus With Linguine

1 pound fresh asparagus
¼ cup olive oil
Salt to taste
Pepper to taste
1½ cups water
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ cup Romano cheese, grated
4 tablespoons butter
¾ pound linguine
½ cup bread crumbs browned in oil

Wash asparagus and break off into 2 or 3-inch pieces. Discard tough ends. Blot with paper towel and saute in oil for 5 minutes. Add salt, pepper, and water. Bring to a boil. Simmer for 5 minutes. Add garlic, cheese, and butter. Slowly simmer for 5 minutes more.

Meanwhile, cook linguine according to package directions. Drain. Spoon asparagus with some broth into individual dishes. Spoon lightly browned crumbs over asparagus pasta. Extra cheese can be added. Serves 6.

Dash of pepper

Melt butter over low heat. Blend in flour until smooth. Gradually add milk, stirring constantly. Cook over medium heat until sauce thickens and comes to a boil. Reduce heat. Simmer 2 to 3 minutes to remove flour taste.

The Art Of Salad Making

Salads have never been more popular than they are today. This is because people are more health and diet conscious. Not only are salads nutritious and tasty, they are economical and easy to prepare.

One of the best things about salads is that you do not have to be a culinary genius to build a really good salad. For that matter, you do not even have to follow a recipe if you have a little imagination and a flair for what things taste delicious together.

With so many greens available at most supermarkets, there is an opportunity to mix new tastes and textures. Leafy greens are rich in vitamin A.

Iceberg lettuce is the most common green salad ingredient, but chickory, spinach, endive, watercress and romaine all can add variety, and new tastes to ordinary salads. When choosing lettuce, choose a light, loose head; it will be sweeter and richer in vitamin A than a heavy, packed one. Also, regardless of what type of greens you use, tear the leaves rather than cut them. Cut greens lose moisture and will wilt quicker. And, the moisture lost from greens will dilute your dressing.

Even though tomatoes cannot be beat as a colorful and nutritious ingredient, think beyond tomatoes to zucchini, carrots, mushrooms, radishes, cauliflower, broccoli, onions, bean sprouts, and almost any other vegetable which is available: Vegetables not only change the flavor of a salad, they can make a standard salad into a main part of the meal.

Fresh or canned fruits make delicious additions to salads. Fruits add color, crispness and a tartness as well as vitamins and minerals.

The most common use of fruits is in a simple mixed fruit salad, which is a nice accompaniment to light meals. Another approach to using fruits in salads is to use the fruit itself as the container for a salad; a melon or pineapple for chicken or tuna salad.

Because you can prepare a small amount, fruit salads give you the flexibility to experiment with lots of different combinations of fruits with different meats or vegetables. As you consider which fruits go with which vegetables or meats, do not discard novel mixtures. For example, strawberries work well in combination with a chicken salad and mandarin oranges with a spinach salad.

Meats, poultry and seafood are good main ingredients for salads. Combined with rice, potatoes or pasta, they can be utilized in a salad after you have served the meat as a main course the day before.

The best way to top off any salad is to use a salad dressing that brings out and compliments the flavors of your salad. Be careful not to use an oil that will mask the flavor of your other ingredients. You can use a specialty oil like walnut, olive or sesame to impart a desired flavor; but be sure it is the flavor that you want.

If you use a specialty oil to obtain a special flavor, consider mixing that oil with a bland-tasting oil. Your salad will still have the flavor from the specialty oil, but you will be able to "stretch" the more expensive specialty oil.

If you add lemon juice to the salad dressing, make sure it is freshly squeezed. Vinegar is often used instead of lemon juice and here you have several different types to choose from. Use the one that suits your taste. The standard ration of vinegar to oil is one to three. But, if you are using a strong vinegar, you may want to use less vinegar and more oil. It is a good idea to add a few drops of oil to your greens before you add the salad dressing. This will coat the leaves and help the greens maintain their crispness.

Try one or both of the following recipes for good eating.

Lemon-Honey Dressing

¾ cup oil
2 tablespoons honey
⅓ cup fresh lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
2 teaspoons minced green onion

Combine all ingredients in a pint jar with a tight fitting lid. Shake until well mixed. If the honey is at room temperature it will dissolve faster. Makes one cup dressing.

Raspberry-Yogurt Dressing

¼ cup red-raspberry jelly or jam, seedless preferred
¼ cup burgundy wine or red-wine vinegar
1 cup red raspberry yogurt
1 cup mayonnaise

In small bowl, combine jelly and wine. Stir to dissolve jelly. Add yogurt and mayonnaise. Stir to blend. Makes 2 cups dressing.

Vegetarian Diets For Children?

DEBRA BRYANT
Wayne Co. Extension Agent

There is a growing number of Americans who don't eat meat, whether because of the expense, religious reasons, or personal taste.

Some people consider it wrong to kill animals to feed humans. But, the reason most often cited by vegetarians is health - they feel that a meatless diet is better for them, due to the lower fat content of the diets they consume.

Dietary practices which are different from the norm should be scrutinized very carefully, particularly if there are children in the family.

When evaluating the appropriateness of a vegetarian diet for children, the degree to which animal products have been eliminated from the diet must be considered.

Many families calling themselves vegetarians eliminate red meat, but still consume poultry eggs, fish and milk products. The lacto-ovo-vegetarian consumes plant foods along with dairy products and eggs, while lacto-vegetarians eliminate eggs. The pure vegetarian consumes only plant foods.

Vegetarian diets are healthful and nutritionally adequate when appropriately planned. There are numerous examples of the positive relationship between a vegetarian diet and reduced risk for several chronic degenerative diseases, such as cancer and coronary heart disease.

For infants and children, well planned diets which include milk products and eggs generally meet all nutritional requirements for growth.

Those children fed diets which exclude animal products can be healthy, but extreme care must be taken to ensure adequate nutrient intake.

Supplements of vitamin D, iron, and vitamin B-12 at levels sufficient to meet the RDA's (Recommended Dietary Allowance) must be provided.

In addition, careful attention must be given to energy intake, as these diets contain high amounts of fiber. A child will become full before he has consumed an adequate amount of calories.

When planning a vegetarian diet for children, include a wide variety of foods. Fruits, vegetables, whole grain cereals, nuts, seeds, legumes, eggs, and dairy products or soy-fortified substitutes should be used. Mixing proteins from these foods over the course of a day appears to satisfy the body's need for growth and maintenance.

For more information, call the Wayne County Cooperative Extension at 253-5970 ext. 239.

Customize a cheeseburger with special seasonings. Add basil, oregano, garlic powder, onion powder, ground red pepper, curry or chili powder to ground beef before grilling; then, top burger with a cheese that complements the seasoning.

Students Recycle Cans To Save Misty Ranch

Misty II gets a loving hug from a fan, Jennifer Lowry. Jennifer is a first grade student at Mastersonville. Pictured riding Misty II is Kerra Allen, a third grade student at Mastersonville and the daughter of the horse's owners, Kendy and Keith Allen.

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Recycling cans may have started out as a project for Earth Week for Manheim elementary students, but it turned into something magical.

On Friday, students were able to see storytales turn into reality when the granddaughter of Misty of Chincoteaque Island came to visit their schools.

The students learned about Misty's story and were able to recognize the characteristic "map of the U.S." markings on Misty II.

Misty II stepped up on a block and "shook hands" with several of the students, as well as showing her preferance for Life Savors brand candy over sugar cubes.

"I love her, she feels like my bed, I feel like sleeping on her every day," said first grade Mastersonville student Jennifer Lowry.

Misty II's grandmother, Misty, was a pony captured more than 40 years ago in Chincoteaque Island's annual pony-penning, and made famous in a children's book by author Marguerite Henry.

Misty II is owned by Kendy and Keith Allen of Manheim. Kendy is the Pennnnsylvania state fundraising chairperson for the Misty Foundation, which was formed in order to preserve the ranch where Misty grew up.

The Manheim students decided that the nine-acre ranch preservation into a historical landmark would be a worthy cause for their recycling efforts.

Misty II came to visit both Sporting Hill and Mastersonville schools to accept the donations. More than 610 pounds of aluminum and 200 pounds of tin have been collected to date, but the students want to continue recycling through the end of the school year, said Principal Claire Storm.

Sporting Hill School raised $66 and Mastersonville School raised $150 for the foundation. Dixon Recyclers donated $50 to the effort.

Six-Year-Old Saves Sister From Choking

Kathryn Shreiner
Special to Lancaster Farming

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Elise Neiderheiser is only six years old, but she is a hero. Elise saved the life of her two-year-old sister, Erin.

Elise and Erin were playing upstairs at their home, at 1979 Mt. Hope Road, Manheim, while sister, Justine, and their mother, Marti were tidying the house downstairs.

Erin entered Elise's bedroom and found a marble; Erin showed Elise the marble. Elise told her sister not to put the marble into her mouth, but Erin immediately did what she had been told not to do and began to choke.

Elise ran downstairs to tell her mother, then raced upstairs ahead of her mother and hugged Erin from the side. Halfway up the stairs Marti noted Erin was not crying or struggling to breathe; she immediately administered her own life-saving technique. Thanks to the quick thinking of Elise and her mother, Marti, the two-year-old is fine and exploring her home.

Elise's heroic and valiant deed was shared at a recently held Brownie Troop #1012 meeting. As a result, the co-leaders, Lisa Sides and Kathy Balmer along with the teen leader, Karyn Rosenberg, realized the need for the Brownies and mothers to learn first-hand the proper life saving technique.

At a recent Brownie meeting, the six- and seven-year-old girls were taught the Heimlich Maneuver. Sharon Gernert, an Emergency Medical Technician with the Manheim Memorial Ambulance showed the girls had stand in back of the person and wrap their arms below the person's ribs and give a hard hug. She is a CPR instructor with the American Red Cross. Sharon patiently presented to mothers and daughters the peoper methods to assist a person who is choking.

First she told the girls they must dial 911 and Tara Sides told those assembled to say, "This is an emergency," after dialing the emergency number. Sharon told the girls they will be required to give a name, town where they live and the emergency happening, and told all assembled that they should never hang up the telephone. Help will be dispatched for assistance.

The girls demonstrated firsthand the Heimlich Maneuver using each other, then their mothers, and vica versa. The adults practiced the maneuver on each other.

Sharon then demonstrated the method used to assist a person unconscious from choking.

All present at the meeting learned a valuable lesson: the gift of life-saving. Sharon wishes to remind adults that children are capable of saving an adult life.

Scout leaders and members of Troop #1012 urge all to learn these life saving facts.

Mother's Day holds a special meaning for the Neiderheiser family thanks to six-year-old Elise's reaction time in an emergency situation.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The sugar peas are blooming and the lawn needs to be mowed. The new seeding of alfalfa is growing and the rye is in the silo. The meadow fence has been repaired and my iris of various colors are blooming.

There is so much activity on the farm after our return from Atlanta. Even so, I find time, while weeding my big strawberry bed, to reminisce.

Our three-year-old grandson was so excited when we arrived at his house that he ran into the kitchen full-speed, stumbled and slid halfway across the wooden floor. After a big breakfast (they fed us too well during our Georgia visit), we drove to Athens to see the State Botantical Garden. There was a special exhibit of very unusual bird houses and tropical plants. Then, we took a nature walk through a nearby woods where tiny signs identified the wildflowers that were growing there. And, if the pansy isn't the state flower of Georgia, it should be. Everywhere we were greeted with large beds of yellow or blue pansies. We ate a big picnic lunch of fried chicken which our daughter had made. We found a picnic table near the Environmental Protection Agency where our son does research. There was a cool breeze and I was glad the little baby had a blanket to be wrapped in as I held her.

Their strawberries were half ripe the first week in April and three-year-old Matthew picked some. He was told by his father that they were sour and so he threw them away. What a waste! So, I encouraged him to go and find them in the grass where he had thrown them. I showed him how his grandma eats them by dipping them in the sugar bowl. He almost bit my finger off eating them.

We went to a small Presbyterian church near Lawrenceville with our son on Sunday morning. In the afternoon we walked through a nearby development. I was struck by the designs of many of the new houses. They had front porches and actually looked like farmhouses.

Our flight to the airport was uneventful. However upon arrival we found that they had lost our luggage.

Quilt Roundup Set To Document History

BOYERTOWN (Berks Co.)—The Goschenhoppen Historians will sponsor a quilt roundup, a series of sessions aimed at indepth documentation of eighteenth, nineteenth, and early twentieth century quilts. The roundup events will be held Saturdays, 9 to 5 -- June 2 at Trinity U.C.C. Church, 532 Main Street, Collegeville; September 8 at Prince of Peace Lutheran Church, 2907 Jolly Road, Plymouth Township; September 29 at Zion U.C.C. Church, Hanover & Chestnut Streets, Pottstown: and November 3 at Emmanuel Lutheran Church, West Broad Street, Souderton.

During the past several years, quilt researchers have been gathering detailed information on antique quilts, realizing the need to assemble data about these significant textiles. For the Goschenhoppen Historians' roundup, area residents are asked to bring any quilts, quilt tops, patches, pieced pillowcases, embroidered squares, quilting implements such as drawings or patterns, photos, letters, and diaries involving quilting to one of the five locations on the appropriate date. The textiles will be examined, registered, and measured by trained volunteers, and pertinent oral history information will be collected. This confidential information will be retained by the Historians and will be available only to qualified quilt scholars doing research. The Historians are interested in any quilt made prior to 1950, no matter how much it was used, even if it is in tatters.

At each roundup, the Historians will provide information about proper quilt conservation. They will have examples of acid free boxes and tissue paper on display, provide explanation sheets, detailing proper textile storage and maintenance, and offer advice on specific quilt problems. Participants will receive copies of the statistical data gathered on each quilt they bring in for study.

Volunteers will examine, register, and measure quilts to retain a history of quilts.

Lang Named York Dairy Princess

Joyce Bupp
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Angela Lang was crowned the 1990 York County dairy princess as the highlight of the annual county pageant, held May 5 at the 4-H Center.

The daughter of Floyd Lang Jr., and Gloria Shaffer, York, Angie is 18 and a senior at Southwestern High School. She owns three registered Holsteins which she shows as a member of the Central 4-H dairy club and Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association. Angie has judged for several years as a member of the York County 4-H dairy judging team. She is employed at Walnut Valley Farms Lawn and Garden Center and Sunnybend Holstein Farm.

For her promotional skit, Angie portrayed a black and white cow promoting the nutritional attributes of milk and dairy products. In response to a question on what her goals would be if chosen dairy princess, Angie said it would be to represent the county's dairy producers to the very best of her ability.

Daisy Brenneman, daughter of Nelson and Judy Brenneman, Spring Grove, was selected the alternate York County dairy princess. She is 18 and a senior at Spring Grove High School, where she sings with the chorus and is an officer of the home arts club. In addition to helping with the family's 58 head of Holsteins and Jerseys, Daisy is employed by Green's Dairy.

With the help of a giant spider prop, Daisy became Little Miss Muffet extolling the virtues of dairy foods during her promotional skit. Asked how she would reply to someone who claimed to not like milk, Daisy explained that she would suggest the milk be flavored, or use other dairy products for the same nutritional value.

Jessica Pomraning, eight-year-old daughter of Myron and Teresa Pomraning, Delta, was chosen the county's first dairy miss. Selected as dairy miss alternates were Becky Kilgore, daughter of Doug and Pam Kilgore, Airville, and Michelle Walker, daughter of Leroy and Brenda Walker, New Freedom. The dairy miss and alternates will accompany the dairy princesses for selected promotional activities.

The pageant also provided a farewell opportunity for outgoing princess Sue Eisenhart, daughter of Rodney and Sara Eisenhart, Thomasville. Sue served as dairy princess for 1988 and 1989, traveling over 3,500 miles during the first year of her reign and visiting 52 classrooms as part of a myriad of promotional activities.

Judges for the pageant were Judy McCarty, dairy producer from Sugar Run, Bradford County, Adams County extension home economist Nina Redding, and W. Thomas Moore, Maryland, and Virginia Milk Producers.

Entertainment for the evening was vocal music by Debbie Miller Brubaker, Manheim dairy farm woman, singing with her parents, Paul and Pat Miller Linglestown. The Miller family were long-time breeders of registered Holsteins at the Great View Farm, and with their two sons, entertained as the Singing Millers during the 1970s. Paul Miller, now a type classifier for the Holstein Association, also served as program emcee.

Mother And Daughter Best Friends

Mother's Day Tribute

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — When Karen Hoffer, Lititz, celebrated her 10th wedding anniversary with her husband Dave on Thursday, she thought of her mother.

That's because Karen took another peek at her wedding gown that her mother had made for the occasion.

And that reminded her of all the other things her mother has done for her over the years.

Karen, who works in Lancaster Farming's classified ad department, said, "There's so many things that makes my mother special. She'd do anything for me."

Her mother, Ruth Keller, admits that some people say she spoils her only daughter, but for this busy mother, love is spelled by doing.

An accomplished seamtress, Ruth sews a wardrobe of clothes for her career-busy daughter.

Karen and her husband live in an apartment within several miles from her parents' Lititz home. Weekly, Ruth shares fresh vegetables, baked goods, and homemade soups with the couple.

Mother and daughter find this arrangement brings fringe benefits. "It makes sure we get together to visit every week," Karen said.

And from their viewpoint, time spent together strengthens their relationship with each other.

Karen said, "She's my best friend."

"I think if you get involved with your daughter and find common interests, you always have a close relationship," Ruth said.

That relationship made the teenage years smooth sailing. Karen recalls, "My parents did so much for me that I didn't want to disappoint them."

As a child, Karen recalls that she and her two brothers had the most fun at home. The Kellers owned a 200-acre Lititz farm where they raised chickens, cows, tobacco, hay, and grains.

Growing up in a family of 10, had taught Ruth self-sufficency and she said, "I wasn't afraid of hard work." When she got married, she worked along with her husband, Charles on their dairy farm. When they sold the farm, Ruth missed the farm work but she never became bored.

"That's when I had more time to take up sewing," she said.

She not only sews clothing but also makes draperies, tablecloths, curtains, and many different crafts for others.

"But I mostly like to make clothing for Karen," Ruth said. "When I sew for pay, it isn't fun any more — it's too much like production."

As a parent, Ruth believes it is important to treat each child equally. She said, "What I do for one child, I do for the other — not the same thing, but something of similar value. She enjoys sewing for her grandchildren and making crafts for them.

The Keller's oldest son, Lynn, who was a Tioga County game protector, died of leukemia in 1978. Another son Dennis is a Lt. Colonel stationed in the U.S. Army in Bolivia with his wife and two children. The distance requires sending packages through the mail and sometimes the family flies home for extended visits in the Keller's home.

"You'll notice my mother doesn't act as old as she is," Karen said.

Her mother broke into a jolly laugh and noted that when people her age gather together usually the first topic of conversation is health.

"I'm not a doctor person," Ruth said. Once she had a broken foot on

Love Is Spelled B-E-E-F

East Berlin volunteers Fred Nell, left, and Jim Boyer know exactly what needs done on the cutting and canning lines after many years of helping to coordinate the relief effort.

Laverne Eby, of Saskatchewan, Canada, is one of the three full-time employees who travel with and operate the Mennonite Central Committee's mobile cannery.

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — The ingredient labels on the shiny cans neatly stacked in cardboard cases say "Beef Chunks."

But the contents of the more than 20,000 cans stacked in the processing plant at Meadowbrook Turkey Farms are more than simple chunks of cooked beef and broth. These cartons of cans are obviously packed full of Christian love.

Beyond the warehouse area, voices raised in animated talk and shared laughter rise above the steady clatter of sharp knives against cutting tables. Volunteers working sinks of hot, sudsy water wash the stickiness from finished cans, while others neatly fasten labels around the two-pound tins. And the loud hissing of steam marks yet another batch of 140 cans being processed for the stomachs of hungry children somewhere across the ocean.

The late-April effort marked the 12th consecutive year that volunteers from the Southern Pennsylvania and Mid-Atlantic districts of the Church of the Brethren gathered at Skip Fitz's Meadowbrook facility to can the nutritious beef and broth for hunger relief.

More than 600 volunteers, from as far away as Midland, Virginia, Jersey Shore, Pennsylvania, and Maryland's Eastern Shore donated their labor for the three daily shifts of deboning, chunking and packing the raw beef. Godfrey Brothers, Loganville, slaughtered the 113 head of cattle donated and purchased for the relief effort.

Central to the program is the mobile steam cannery owned by the Mennonite Central Committee headquartered at Akron in Lancaster County. The Brethren group rents, per number of finished cans, the traveling processing plant. With it come three paid operators who oversee the five steam-pressure canners which process the beef for a minimum of two hours at 240-degrees.

"This is a mission project, a concern for our fellow men," explains York butcher Roger Miller, chairman of the beef canning program. "We know we're helping fill hungry stomachs."

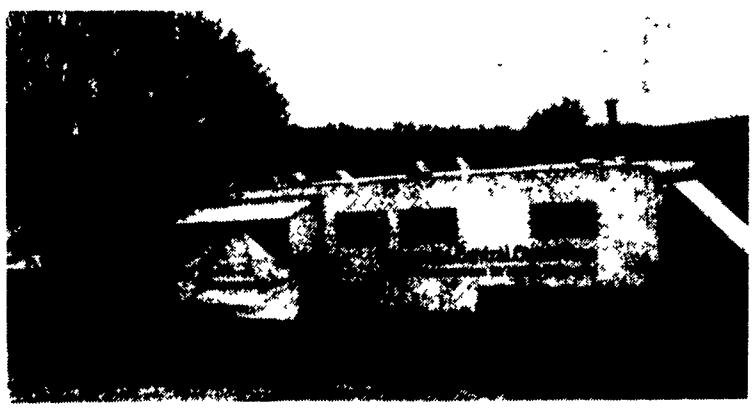
Final destination of the beef is as far away as Africa and as close as soup kitchens in Baltimore and Washington, D.C. Victims of natural disasters like Hurricane Hugo and flooding in Johnstown are fed as well with the yellow-labeled tins bearing a dove logo. A large portion of the beef goes to an orphanage in Port Au Prince, Haiti, where up to one thousand children are fed daily.

"We don't know what poverty is," says Miller, who has personally visited the Haiti orphanage. "You come back a different person. Luke Neree', who operates the orphanage, has attended some of our area meetings. We know where this effort goes and what it does."

A sample can from each batch goes to Hanover Foods, which donates the service of holding the samples at a 90-degree incubation level for a quality test period of 10 days. The quality test assures that the beef and broth meet the strict safety standards for canned meats.

Jim Boyer of East Berlin took five days off from his job and his farm to help coordinate the volunteers.

"We never know for sure just how many will show up. But it always works out. The volunteers have been wonderful," says Boyer, a veteran of the disaster assistance following flooding in Mississippi. "We think we don't have time, but if a disaster happened to us, we'd have to make time. I can't get away too often to help with disaster efforts somewhere else, but this project is something I can do right here."



This mobile cannery owned by the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, travels from place to place wherever volunteers offer to can meat for the needy.

Rabbit Conference

The annual Pennsylvania Rabbit Conference has been slated for Saturday, June 9, 1990 at Montgomery County 4-H Center in Creamery, Pennsylvania.

Last year it was held in Cambria County. The event, sponsored by Penn State University, the Montgomery County Cooperative Extension, and the Pennsylvania Rabbit Breeders Association, is open to all rabbit owners and features sessions for both the experienced and beginner producers.

The featured speaker for the experienced producers will be Dr. Terry Reed of Markle, Indiana, who is a noted producer, author, and former president of the American Rabbit Breeders Association. He will cover "Nutrition — What and Why" as well as "Conditioning for Show" during the morning session. In the afternoon he will do a workshop on "Diseases of Rabbits."

Also during the morning session, Diane Geitzenauer of Long Valley, New Jersey, will address the youth or beginner attendees with "General Care and Handling" and "Selecting the Right Rabbit for You." Geitzenauer is a 4-H leader, A.R.B.A. registrar, state representative to A.R.B.A. and a Mini-Lop breeder.

In the afternoon, participants have a choice of attending any two of the six following workshops: "Angora Wool," "Update on Rabbit Equipment," "Basic Veterinary Skills for Rabbit Owners," "Genetics," "Tanning," and "Diseases." Also planned are educational displays and a mini-trade show which will be open during the day. Conference registration starts at 8:30 a.m. with the welcoming address slated for 9:15 a.m. The workshops conclude at 4:15 p.m.

The registration fee for adults is $10 per person, $5 for youth (ages 8-19), or $15 per family. Registrations are due by May 29. To obtain information and registration materials for the conference, contact Nancy Kadwill, county agent, 1015 Route 113, Box 20, Creamery, Pa. 19430, (215) 489-4315.

Franklin Co. 4-H

Franklin County will be holding their 8th annual Spring Preview Show on Saturday, June 2, at 10 a.m. at the Shippensburg Fairgrounds in Shippensburg, PA. Entry deadline is May 24. For more information or entry forms, call Leon Lebo, (717) 597-2176 or 597-2618.

Alexandria
Outlook Ag.
4-H Club

Dr. Frank E. Skacel Jr. of Ridgeview Veterinary Clinic, in R.D.#1 Derry, Pa., was the guest speaker at the New Alexandria Outback Ag. Club's monthly meeting.

Skacel showed the members how to take the best care of their project animals. Most members will be selecting their animals for show soon and should keep his guidelines in mind: Buy from a reputable source; observe the conditions that the animals are kept in; and make sure the animals are healthy, alert, and in good physical condition.

He also explained how to bring a project animal home and introduce it to its new environment. In addition, he explained how to tell when your animal is sick, and what to do when it is sick.

"Even though the runt of the litter looks so cute and special, it's much better to pick a bigger and stronger animal," he said.

Delaware 4-H

Delaware 4-H will use a grant from Bob Evans Farms Inc./Owens Country Sausage to sponsor an educational field trip to Hatfield Quality Meats, Hatfield Packing Co., in Lansdale, Pa. The grant program, designed to enlighten 4-H members to the pork industry, is coordinated by the National 4-H Council, a not-for-profit organization that uses private resources to support 4-H.

4-H members and project leaders will tour the processing company and hear presentations about current marketing trends in the pork industry and a new grading system used to determine payments to pork producers.

In response to consumer demand for lean pork products, the company developed a method of determining payment to pork producers based on carcass merit evaluation, as well as live weight of the hog. The percentages of fat and lean are measured and compared to a company standard. Producers with carcasses above the standard receive bonuses while those below the standard are penalized.

which she walked for several weeks before she consulted a doctor.

"Sure," she admitted. "At my age, I have some creaks and stiffness, but I laugh about it and keep busy. I try to keep a good outlook."

All those years of working on the farm engraved the getting-up-early habit within her. Bedtime is generally 11:00 p.m.

"There's always so much to do," she said.

If it isn't a sewing project, it's quilting or cross stitching or a craft project or freezing produce from their big garden or helping to cook for the Lebanon County Beagle Club, where her husband is a member, or a meeting with the pinochle club or bowling team.

Ruth keeps few of her projects for herself. Instead she gives them to friends or as fundraisers to non-profit organizations.

Ruth's mother died at age 96. She also was an accomplished seamtress and often sewed for others.

"Even in the nursing home, she was still hemming dresses until the end," Ruth said. "And I hope to do that also."

A bit shy about being interviewed for a newspaper article, Ruth said, "I'm nothing special, really. I'm just ordinary."

But to Karen, her mother is the greatest — and that's what really counts.

Lasagna Vegetable Roll-Ups

12 lasagna
1 pound part-skim ricotta cheese
4-ounces part-skim mozzarella, shredded
2 small broccoli stalks or asparagus steamed for 5 minutes, drained and chopped, about 2 cups
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
2 scallions, trimmed and chopped
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil or 2 teaspoons dried basil
1 tablespoon fresh oregano or 1 teaspoon dried oregano
¼ cup cup chopped fresh parsley
Spaghetti sauce or tomato sauce

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Add the lasagna to 4 quarts of boiling water with 2 teaspoons salt. Start testing the pasta after 12 minutes and cook it until it is al dente. Drain the pieces and spread them on a clean dish towel to dry.

In a large bowl, mix the ricotta, mozzarella, broccoli or asparagus, mushrooms, scallions, basil, oregano, and parsley.

To assemble the dish, spread 1 cup of the spaghetti sauce over the bottom of an 11x13-inch baking pan.

Spread about ¼ cup of the cheese and vegetable mixture over a lasagna strip, starting at one end, roll up the strip. Place the roll, seam side down in the baking pan. Repeat the process with the remaining lasagna strips and filling. Pour the remainder of the sauce over the rolls and cover the pan tightly with aluminum foil. Bake the rolls for 20 minutes, then remove the foil and bake them for 15 to 20 minutes more. Serve the roll-ups piping hot from the pan. Serves 6.

Cheesy Classic Lasagna

1 pound lasagna, uncooked
1 pound bulk Italian sausage
½ cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
2 8-ounce cans tomato sauce, divided
2 6-ounce cans tomato paste
1½ cups hot water
1 teaspoon basil leaves
1 teaspoon oregano leaves
½ teaspoon marjoram leaves
1 16-ounce container Ricotta cheese
1 10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach, thawed and well drained
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
3 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese
2 cups shredded muenster cheese

Prepare lasagna according to package directions, drain. In medium skillet, combine sausage, onion, and garlic. Cook until sausage is no longer pink, stirring often to break sausage apart; drain. Reserve ⅔ cup tomato sauce. Stir remaining tomato sauce, tomato paste, water, basil, oregano, and marjoram into meat mixture. Bring to boil. Reduce heat, simmer 5 minutes. In medium bowl, combine ricotta, spinach, Parmesan, eggs, and salt; mix well. In 13x9-inch pan, spread reserved ⅔ cup tomato sauce. Layer ⅓ each lasagna, ricotta mixture, meat mixture, mozzarella and muenster cheeses. Repeat layers. Bake, uncovered in a 350 degree oven until hot and bubbly, 40 to 50 minutes. Let stand 5 to 10 minutes before cutting. Refrigerate leftovers. Serves 12.

Cook's Question

Old-Fashioned Potato Soup With Dry Rivels

4 medium-sized potatoes
1½ quarts water
2 tablespoons butter
Salt
½ cup flour
1 egg
¼ cup milk
½ cup cream

Cook diced potatoes in salted water until soft. Add butter. To make rivels, rub together egg and flour; add milk. These are best made by cutting through mixture with two forks. Drop rivels, which are no larger than a cherry stone, into boiling potatoes, stirring to prevent packing together. Cook 5 minutes with kettle covered. Add ½ cup cream. Garnish with parsley or pieces of crisp bacon. Serves 4.

Rivel Soup

1 quart chicken or beef broth
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg, beaten
1 cup whole kernel corn, crushed

Bring the broth to a boil. Combine flour, salt, and egg until mixture is crumbly. Rub through hands into the boiling broth, add the corn and cook about 10 minutes. The rivels will look like boiled rice when cooked. Serves 8.

ANSWER — Kathy Konhus, Pottsville, wanted a vegetable lasagna with tomato sauce recipe. Thanks to Arlene Malasky, Macungie; and to Anna Martin, Denver, for sending two recipes.

QUESTION — Virginia Grove, Delta, requested a recipe for White Texas Sheet Cake. Thanks to Crystal Brant, Red Hill; Bertha Sharp, Mifflintown; and others for sending recipes.

White Texas Sheet Cake

1 cup water

2 cups plus 2 tablespoons sugar
2 cups plus 2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
½ cup sour cream
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon orange or lemon extract
1 orange or lemon rind, grated

Bring water and margarine to a boil. Remove from heat and while hot, add flour, sugar, and salt. Beat in eggs, sour cream, and baking soda. Add orange or lemon rind and extract. Pour into greased and floured jelly roll pan or sheet cake pan and bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes.

Frosting:

½ cup butter
6 tablespoons milk
3½ cups confectioner's sugar
½ teaspoon lemon extract
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
Rind of 1 lemon, grated

To prepare frosting, boil butter and milk. Remove from heat and stir in confectioner's sugar, lemon rind, and extracts. Frost cake while warm. When cool, cut into bars. May be frozen for later use.

FORAGE BLEND
ProfiSeed, Inc.
Route 2, Hampton, IA 50441

What it is...
Milage is a unique blend of specially selected milo and soybean varieties that compliment one another to maximize forage yield, protein content and palatability.

What it does...
Milage is a versatile forage crop that offers many advantages:
HIGH YIELDS. Yields as high as 18 tons (50% moisture) can be obtained with high management techniques. Yields of 8 to 12 ton are easily achieved on soils with good water holding capacity and proper nutritional balance.
HIGH PROTEIN. Under the most ideal conditions, protein content can test as high as 18%. Generally, though, protein will most likely range between 12 and 16%.
TDN. Milage will consistently provide TDN levels of 60-65%
LOWER COST. Compared to corn silage, Milage is a more economical crop to produce. No herbicide cost, no insecticide cost, much lower fertilizer costs and no cultivation add up to big savings on crop expenses.

CONSTRUCTED FOR YEARS OF MAINTENANCE-FREE SERVICE.

You'll get more out of an Eby aluminum grain body. Lightweight and rugged aluminum provides rigid, fuel-efficient support to fill your grain hauling needs

Eby packs years of experience, workmanship and performance into every aluminum body it manufactures. And special Eby options let you customize your body to your individual operation. Available in standard lengths, each unit is designed to provide you with an investment in durable performance and practical economy.

Look over these outstanding features.

- Less weight. Eby aluminum bodies weigh up to 30% less than comparable steel and wood construction
- Less maintenance. Aluminum construction won't rust or rot - never needs painting.
- Long-life durability. Heavy-duty structural components and hollow-tube frame combine with aluminum floor and sides to stand up to years of hard work

Get outstanding value in EVERY Eby trailer.

Whether it's a top-of-the-line Ruff Neck or an economical Wrangler, you know your livestock trailer is built to last if it's from Eby.

Aluminum construction is one of the main reasons these trailers are so durable and reliable. They'll never rust through or need welding. In fact, without ever being painted, an Eby livestock trailer will stay looking new for years.

Standard features make your Eby trailer a profitable investment. Extra-heavy axles, brakes, wheels and tires. Thick aluminum sheet flooring. Sturdy posts and rails. Even an aerodynamically designed front end is standard.

And, while standard features make even the economical Eby Wrangler far more than an average economy-model, we custom-build everything we make. So you tell us what you want. Choose from a long list of options. Select those features you need for your particular operation. Whether it's a Wrangler or deluxe Ruff Neck, the trailer you buy will be the trailer you need.

Tractor Engines Have Quadram Power

DES MOINES, Iowa — Massey-Ferguson has introduced three tractors in the 100-horsepower-and-over category, featuring the Perkins 1000 Series engine with Quadrum power for improved fuel economy, increased torque, longer life, and quieter operation.

The M-F 3120 tractor at 100 PTO horsepower has a naturally aspirated engine. The M-F 3140 at 115 PTO horsepower has a turbocharged engine. The M-F 3660 at 140 PTO horsepower has a wastegate turbocharged engine.

The new Perkins 1000 Series engine with Quadram Power features a new design combustion chamber that achieves more complete air/fuel mixing for economical, powerful, and cleaner combustion.

The design of the piston head is a major breakthrough in farm engine technology. Four lobes or indentations in the piston head create an improved rate of swirl for improved air/fuel mixing. The design of the piston head gives rise to the Quadram — Quad meaning four — and RAM for Rapid Air Movement.

The Quadram-powered engine burns a higher proportion of the fuel in the engine power stroke, resulting in less mechanical stress on block, piston, connecting rods, crankshaft, and head gaskets. it is also much quieter and has improved fuel efficiency.

Other advanced design features include a gear-driven water pump, a helically cut gear train for precise timing of fuel pump and camshaft, and an integral oil cooler.

All three tractors will be available with radial tires. amd the M-F 3140, M-F 3660, and M-F 3680 will offer an optional wider, fully adjustable seat with pneumatic float.

Three new tractors featuring the new Perkins 1000 Series engine with Quadram power are available from Massey-Ferguson. They are the M-F 3660, shown here, at 140 PTO hp, the M-F 3140 at 115 PTO hp, and the M-F 3120 at 100 PTO hp.

A new three-point hitch is standard on the M-F 3100 Series tractors. The new hitch design allows the operator to change the geomctry of the hitch lift, travel, and capacity.

All three new tractors offer Autotronic and Datatronic computer controlled operating systems, electronic draft control, and Perkins 1000 Series engines with Quadram Power.

DVC Offers Honey Bee Programs

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.)— Delaware Valley College is offering two opportunities for honey bee enthusiasts.

The first is offered by the college in conjunction with the Bucks and Montgomery County Beekeepers' Associations and the Delaware Valley College Apiary Society, which will be sponsoring its annual 1990 Summer Bee Meeting on Saturday, June 16, 1990. featured this year will be a program dealing with two serious problems facing beekeepers: the tracheal and the varroa mites.

The program will be presented by Tim Schuler, apiary inspector, New Jersey Department of Agriculture. Schuler is a graduate of Delaware Valley College, and was involved in beekeeping for a number of years before becoming a New Jersey bee inspector. The formal part of the program will be held in Room 114, Mandell Hall, starting at 1:00 p.m. It will be preceded by a bring-your-own picnic lunch at noon in front of Mandell Hall. Following the formal program, weather permitting, there will be an open house at the college's Apiary and Bee House, where refreshments will be served.

The second program will be offered on the following weekend, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, June 22, 23, and 24. This is "Series A" of its three-day advanced beekeeping short courses. The course is under the direction of Dr. Robert Berthold, Delaware Valley College's beekeeping specialist, who will be assisted by Jack Matthenius, the New Jersey supervisor of bee culture, retired; Frank Wojcik, Cook College bee specialist; and Gary Bradshaw, a commercial beekeeper, queen breeder, and bee supply dealer from New Jersey.

This course involves three different topic areas. The first topic is the queen honey bee, including her life history, swarming, methods of its control, methods of rearing, artificial insemination, and behavior. The second topic deals with honey bee diseases and pests, including the major brood diseases, internal and external mites, other insects, animals, and insecticides. The third topic is honey, including how the bees make it, its chemistry, the types, methods of harvesting and processing, production of honey fruit spreads, and home uses of honey.

Enrollment in this course will be limited, and participants must have a minimum of three years of beekeeping experience and/or have taken another beekeeping course. Further information about this course or the program on June 16 can be obtained by writing to Dr. Berthold, Delaware Valley College, Doylestown, PA 18901, (215) 345-1500.

Rotary Combine For Large Acreage Farms

DES MOINES, Iowa — Massey-Ferguson has introduced a new rotary combine, the M-F 8570, for larger acreage farms. The M-F 8570, a Class VI rotary combine has been extensively tested and proven in all crops and field conditions.

"The productivity and output of the new M-F 8570 rotary combine is exceptional," said Dale Brcka, M-F product marketing manager for combines. "With the addition of this rotary combine to our product line, Massey-Ferguson will be the only company in North America offering both conventional and rotary combines in 1990."

The new M-F 8570 rotary combine features load-sensing hydraulics, hydostatic four-speed constant-mesh transmission drive, and planetary final drives. An exclusive direct crop discharge eliminates the need for a power-consuming beater, and the longer rotor length provides larger threshing and separating capacity for more comlete threshing and clean grain samples.

The M-F 8570 is powered by a six-cylinder, 220-horsepower, turbo-charged, after-cooled Cummins "C" Series diesel engine, which has a reputation for efficiency and reliability. This engine provides lugging power when needed, and has plenty of reserve power for hilly fields, soft ground, or unloading on-the-go.

The hydrostatic drive combined with the four-speed transmission provides an excellent range of travel speeds, minimizes gear changes, saves time, increases efficiency, and is easy to operate.

The large capacity 227-bushel grain tank features a fast-filling clean grain auger, and can be unloaded in approximately two minutes on-the-go with the electro-hydraulic swing turret unloader.

The operator seat adjusts for comfort and a highly efficient ventilation system, 17,000-BTU air conditioner, and 13,000-BTU heater maintains operator comfort in all weather conditions.

A 15-channel electronic monitor and six-channel and selectable digital disply enable the operator to monitor engine rpm, ground speed, cleaning fan rpm, rotor rpm, fuel supply, battery voltgage, coolant temperature and level, oil pressure, air filter, shoe speed, returns elevator speed, grain elevator speed, chopper speed, hydraulic oil level and temperature, and grain tank 95 percent full warning.

A unique rotor feed system with an exclusive inlet beater, extra-wide 44-inch feeder elevator, and large 2,205-square inch concave threshing area are matched with a unique direct-discharge rotor, large chaffer, and sieve to provide unequalled cleaning at maximum capacity levels.

A closed-center, load-sensing hydraulic system automatically monitors pressure and flow requirements and pumps only the amount required at any instant. Unlike open-center systems that constantly pump at full capacity, the Massey-Ferguson system consumes less power and runs cooler.

Grain headers up to 30 feet, built for years of dependable use, are available for the M-F 8570. A unique power-cut cutterbar provides more cuts per stroke than conventional cutterbars for greater cutting speed and capacity.

A low-profile quick-attach header lets the operator quickly convert from direct-cut to swathed grain in just minutes.

Soybean headers feature the fast power-cut cutterbar to save more crop and reduce shattering. The flexible cutterbar, automatic header-height-control, and automatic reel speed control enable optimum setting for fast harvesting.

Guernsey Breeders Win

These three youngsters fared well during the state Guernsey Breeders Association annual convention held recently in Chambersburg. From left, Galen McDonald, of Imler, was chosen as the state's Oustanding Guernsey Boy, while Melissa Morrow, of Tyrone, was selected as Outstanding Guernsey Girl. Dale E. Mummert, of Chambersburg, was named Oustanding Guernsey Youth and is eligible to compete at the National Guernsey Convention in Evansville, Ind.

What Are America's Eating

In the last 10 years Americans have increased their consumption of skim milk, carbonated soft drinks, and food mixtures made primarily with grain such as pizza and macaroni and cheese. At the same time, they have decreased their consumption of whole milk and eggs. There has been relatively little change in the amounts of fruits and vegetables eaten despite nutrition education messages that encourage us to eat more of these items. In 1987-88, about 45 percent of individuals reported eating food away from home, up from 43 percent 10 years earlier. These are some of the preliminary findings from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's 1987-88 Nationwide Food Consumption Survey.

COMPARE THESE FEATURES AND OPTIONS

Simple hydraulics allows one valve to operate the lift and stabilizer cylinders. Center plumbing means less hose length and easier coupling.

The basic box is heavy-duty steel welded seams, and reinforced for even more strength.

Standard offset hitch adjusts in 5-inch steps to lengths from 6'3" to 7'11". To allow for different row crop spacings, you can offset either right or left 5, 7½, 10 or 12½ inches.

Rub rails offer more protection to vehicles when approaching, during dumping cycle, and when departing

Stabilizer cylinders hydraulically lock on to axle to hold wagon rigid during dump cycle

Galvanized roof features vent insert for straight-through air flow

The model 700 dump wagon is designed for years of trouble free service. The hydraulic system with a cable assist is designed to unload large loads of up to 20,000 lbs. quickly and efficiently even if the load is not distributed evenly

Make your operation safer • Use year round • Variety of crops • All field conditions • Operate in wet and muddy

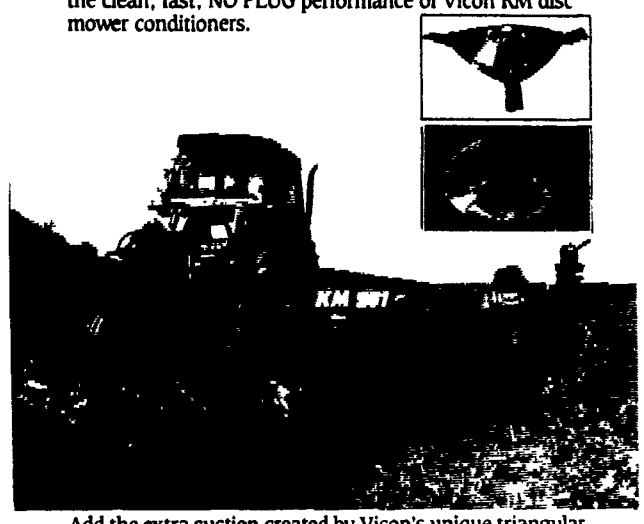
GET THE EXTRA EDGE

Put a Vicon three-bladed disc mower conditioner through wet, heavy, tangled crops. Then compare the difference.

With almost double the number of cuts per minute over two-bladed disc competitors, and six times the cuts per minute over sicklebar systems, it's easy to understand the clean, fast, NO PLUG performance of Vicon KM disc mower conditioners.



Add the extra suction created by Vicon's unique triangular discs, the full swivel hitch that lets you cut square corners on the move, and gentle, full width conditioning, and you're looking at a high capacity machine that puts productivity in a whole new dimension. Four models cut from 7′ to 10′6″ widths

Vicon's got the edge. The extra edge.

See for yourself. Visit us today.

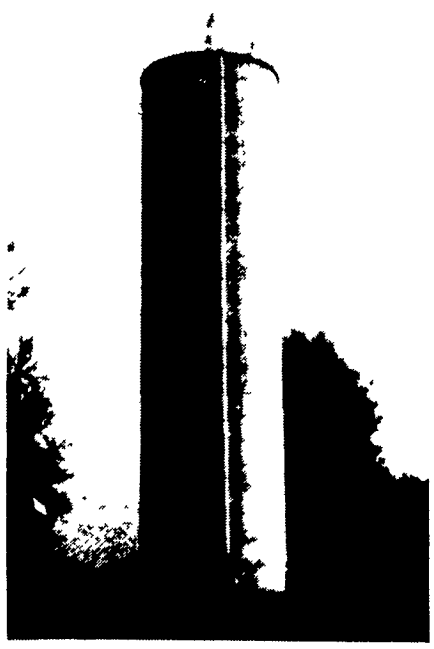
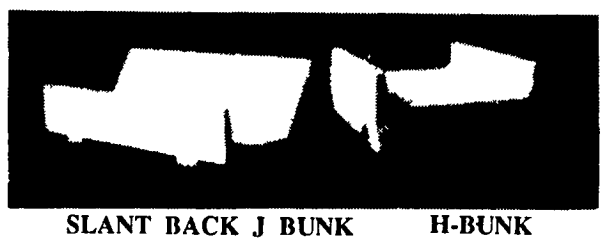
"Consider The Concrete Advantages"



The best storage system for high moisture cob corn is a poured concrete SOLLENBERGER SILO, with bottom unloading. The feed can be safely stored at less than 30% moisture, air is effectively excluded limiting mold growth, the silo is equipped with a distributor to keep separation to a minimum which means more efficient unloading and consistent ration. The 6" solid concrete wall reflects heat meaning that heat damage is minimized and feed is kept cooler. Now Is "Decision Time". Make Plans Now To Have Your Sollenberger Silo Erected In Time To Store Your High Moisture Ground Ear Corn.



SLANT BACK J BUNK H-BUNK

Let Us Know Your Needs. We Can Deliver From Our Large Inventory And Set On Your Prepared Site. OR: We Can Load On Your Truck To Help Save On Freight Costs. We Have Several Sizes And Styles To Choose From, Plus Metal Posts, For Cable, Which Can Be Bolted To The Bunk To Keep Cattle Out.

MANURE STORAGE SYSTEMS

- Manure Storage Systems For The Small Herd - or The 400 Cow Herds And Larger.
- Systems Adaptable To Any Type Equipment
- SCS Approved
- Circular Tanks Poured-In-Place Above Ground - In Ground - Or Uneven Backfill.
- Pre-Cast Concrete panels Delivered And Set On Your Prepared Site.

CONSIDER THE ADVANTAGES OF HIGH MOISTURE EAR CORN

Farmers who use ground shelled corn rather than ground ear corn when putting up high moisture corn (HMC) are not only leaving the cob in the field, but they are leaving at least $150. worth of milk per acre of corn in the field.

These remarks were made by Dr. Howard Larson, noted Mid-Western dairy nutritionist and management specialist.

Further comments based upon years of research included:

* Any amount of cob is better than none.
* It is not economically feasible nor best for the cow to feed high moisture shelled corn.
* It is not necessary to feed hay to dairy cows.

When cob is included with the grian, you not only get an extra 10 to 12 percent HMC by weight, but you get better digestibility in your cows. By adding the cob to the ration, you keep a floor of fiber under the total ration and fiber can supply a lot of energy; and you get better rumen action.

Northwest Tour Deadline Nears

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)— Time is running out for Pennsylvania beef and sheep producers to participate in the 1990 Northwest Stockman's Tour at reduced travel rates.

"This tour is a result of producer inquiries about production and management practices used by western beef and sheep producers," said Clair Engle, Penn State associate professor of animal science. "Cooperative extension and industry personnel in both Pennsylvania and the West have organized an extended 13-day educational tour throughout south central and northeastern Oregon, across the rangelands of Idaho, and mountains of southwestern Montana."

The tour itinerary includes forage/animal production practices, innovative livestock breeding schemes, multi-land use of public lands, "niche marketing" programs, and livestock research trials.

Reduced airfare reservations for the September 10-23 activity are available only until June 8. Sign-up without the special rates will continue through July, or until the allocated 47 spaces have been filled.

Tour brochures and resrvation forms can be requested by writing or calling MTS Travel Agency, 102 E. Main Street, PO Box 547, Ephrata, PA 17522, (717) 733-4131.

THE GENETICS OF GROWTH

Herbert Siegel
Professor and Head
Department of Poultry Science

The rapid growth rate of the commercial broiler can be traced to advances in knowledge in nutrition, physiology, disease control, and genetics.

In the period from 1940 to 1960, the broiler chicken changed from a 3-pound bird marketed in 16 weeks to a 3.50-pound bird marketed in 8 weeks, with total consumption of more than 12 pounds of feed. In 1990, the broiler chicken is marketed at 3.50 to 4.25 pounds, and requires 6.50 to 8.0 pounds of feed — a conversion rate of about 1.88 pounds of feed per pound of gain — which is a 100 percent improvement in efficiency in 30 years.

The consequence to the consumer is that today's broiler costs less per pound than it did in 1940. During the same period, the value of the dollar has declined by about 300 percent.

While some of this tremendous increase in efficiency can be attributed to better nutrition and management, the greatest effect has been the result of genetic progress. However, associated with this rapid growth rate is an increase in the fat content of the carcass, especially in the abdominal area.

This increase in fat is wasteful to the grower and processor, and — in today's health-conscious society — distasteful to the consumer. When chickens are bred to grow more rapidly, they are also bred to have larger appetites. In fact, up to 90 percent of the rapid growth can be attributed to the bird's willingness to eat more, even when the digestive tract is partly full.

In the laboratory of Dr. Guy Barbato, assistant professor of poultry science at Penn State, researchers are studying the inheritance of growth rate and how this relates to appetite. With very sensitive instruments, they can measure minute quantities of the brain chemicals that control the appetite of the bird, relate the levels of these chemicals to daily gain, and, most importantly, show how these chemicals influence the amount of fat distributed in the carcass.

By studying genetic stocks differing in growth characteristics, the researchers will be able to understand the relationship between growth and appetite, and eventually manipulate the fat levels in the finished product.

Ag Conservation Banquet Held

EBENSBURG (Cambria Co.) — The annual conservation banquet sponsored by the Conservation District, ASCS, SCS, FmHA, and the Bureau of Forestry was held here on April 24, 1990.

James McMullen, director, conservation and environmental protection division, ASCS, was guest speaker for the event. Coming from a farm background in Armagh, Indiana County, PA. McMullen previously was an ASCS district director and northeast area director, ASCS office in Washington, D.C.

Mixing humor and fact, McMullen discussed aspects of the 1985 Food Security Act relating to conservation. He emphasized the importance of protecting groundwater and planting trees.

Greater flexibility in crop planting, income protection, and an extension of the Conservation Reserve Program through 1995 may be aspects of the 1990 Farm Bill farmers can anticipate.

McMullen noted that everyone can actively conserve natural resources if they recycle, avoid littering, and conserve water. He stressed the importance of teamwork in the environmental age.

The Conservation District then presented John and Dave Shoemaker of T&E Farms, RD Ebensburg with the District's Outstanding Farmer Award. The Shoemakers operate a sheep farm just north of Ebensburg. Their operation consists of 275 ewes and 500 lambs. They follow the intensive grazing system.

Mike Yasick from Penn Cambria High School received the Outstanding Conservation Educator Award.

Winners of the 1990 Conservation District poster contest were Ashley Waddell, University Park School; Daniel Hinton, Westwood Elementary; and David Oravec, Central Cambria High School.

Distinguished Length of Service Certificates were presented to George Farabaugh, Carrolltown for 30 years of service and Edward Hogue of Loretto for 20 years of service as community committeemen for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Beef Industry Captures Top Awards

CHICAGO, Ill. — "Beef. Real Food for Real People" received national recognitions from "Advertising Age" magazine and the National Agri-Marketing Association.

"Advertising Age," a leading publication for the advertising industry, selected the beef industry "Manhattan, Montana" spot as the top food commercial produced in 1989. The publication reviewed more than 1800 commercials to select the best in 13 categories. The beef spot was one of five finalists in the food category. Some of the other winners in their categories included Nike, United Airlines, American Express, Pepsi-Cola, and Energizer batteries.

Bob Garfield, editor-at-large for the publication, said, "Beef has a tough sell these days. But instead of trying to argue the case of beef, the industry went for image advertising. It was very charming, disarming . . . very surprising. The mistaken city identifies work very well. And we think it made you feel better about beef after you saw it."

"Advertising Age" said the beef industry commercial was selected not only for its creativity, but also for achieving its marketing objectives.

Beef checkoff-funded programs also dominated the producer-funded categories at the "Best of NAMA" awards competition during the National Agri-Marketing Association convention earlier this week in St. Louis. Three programs received first place awards and three programs received merits.

The beef industry advertising campaign "Beef. Real Food for Real People" was selected as the top producer-funded advertising campaign for the second year in a row. It was also one of six finalists in the "Best of Show" competition.

For the second time, a checkoff-funded program captured top honors in the influencer category. The "Munchsters Talk About Food," a preschool education program, was awarded first place. Public relations efforts with the foodservice industry on behalf of the beef industry was also a first-place recipient in the producer-funded public relations category. All four public relations finalists in this category were beef checkoff-funded programs.

The "Best of NAMA" awards competition is conducted to recognize creative excellence in agricultural marketing and advertising. According to the National Agri-Marketing Association, the finalists in this competition truly are "the best of agriculture." There were 922 finalists in more than 50 categories in this year's competition.

"Prime Time — A News Update for the Beef Industry," which is a producer communications project funded by the Beef Board, received two merit awards. The National Beef Cook-Off video news release also received a merit award in the competition.

"To be recognized by your peers as one of the best in the business is truly gratifying," said Beef Industry Council Chairman Polly Owen, an Oregon cattle producer. "We work very hard at these programs to make sure they're doing what producers want them to do, but also, we want them to have an impact on consumers and their attitude toward beef."

Owen says, "All the programs funded by the checkoff are thoroughly researched and evaluated for their effectiveness. the 'Best of NAMA' awards competition and the 'Advertising Age' award are just one form of evaluation that says we're on the right track."

Promotion, education, consumer information, and producer communications are checkoff-funded programs managed on behalf of producers and importers by the Beef Industry Council of the Meat Board, a federation of 44 state beef councils that works to build demand for beef.

Lyme Disease Found Throughout Md.

BALTIMORE, Md. — A recent collaborative study involving seven state and federal agencies shows the bacterium that causes Lyme disease has been found throughout the state of Maryland, with the exception of the four westernmost counties and Caroline County on the Eastern Shore.

The study, entitled the "1989 Maryland Deer Tick Survey," involved the efforts of the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, the Maryland Department of Agriculture (MDA), the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene (DHMH), the Maryland Department of Natural Resources (DNR), the United States Army Environmental Hygiene Activity-North, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), and the University of Maryland. Funding for the study was provided by all 23 Maryland counties as they all participated in the study.

Lyme disease is transmitted by the deer tick — a very small arthropod that is hard to detect, unlike the larger and more commonly recognized wood tick. An immature deer tick is so small, it is not much larger than the period at the end of this sentence. Fully engorged (fed) females may be larger than a kernel of corn.

In November, 1989 the collaborative study began with the collection of deer ticks to determine their distribution throughout the state. The ticks were collected from deer brought into a designated DNR checking station in each county during the state's deer hunting season. They were than analyzed for the bacterium causing Lyme disease.

Deer ticks were found in each county except Garrett and Washington. They were heavily abundant in the counties surrounding the Chesapeake Bay, moderately abundant in central Maryland, and least abundant in the Western counties.

Lyme disease bacterium was isolated from deer ticks in every county except Garrett, Allegany, Washington, Frederick, and Caroline.

"This shouldn't give Marylanders living in those areas the impression that Lyme disease can't be contracted in those counties," said Adele Wilzack, secretary of DHMH. "Although the risk in the western part of the state may be less, residents in those areas should take efforts to avoid tick bites."

"The 1989 study will give us crucial baseline information to evaluate future tick surveys and to monitor the spread of the deer tick in Maryland," said Craig S. Oliver, Ph.D., director, Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, who has been involved in the tick survey since its inception.

"This project is an excellent example of many state, county, and federal agencies working together to assess the potential health risks of Lyme disease to people in Maryland. I am pleased with the efforts of all people involved in the cooperative project," said Wayne A. Cawley Jr., Maryland secretary of agriculture.

The deer tick distribution found in the study corresponds to the pattern of reported human cases of Lyme disease in Maryland. The DHMH recorded 138 cases of Lyme disease in Maryland in 1989. Eighteen cases were reported in Baltimore County, followed by Montgomery County with 16, Anne Arundel with 14, and Charles with 13. Kent and Queen Anne's Counties each reported 11 cases; Calvert and Prince George's Counties each reported 8 cases. Seven cases were reported in Cecil County, 6 in Baltimore City, and 4 in Harford County. Dorchester, Frederick, Howard, and Saint Mary's Counties each reported 3 cases while Caroline, Talbot, Wicomico, and Worcester Counties each reported 2 cases. One case each was reported in Carroll and Washington Counties.

So far, in 1990, about 10 cases of Lyme disease have been reported in Maryland.

Personal protective measures remain the best means of reducing the risk of Lyme disease. These measures include:

- Use a tick repellent containing permethrin on clothing as directed on the label.
- Wear light-colored clothing to make detection of ticks easier.
- Tuck pant legs into socks or tape pant legs to top of boots to prevent ticks from getting under clothing.
- Make frequent "tick checks" and remove ticks promptly.

Carefully remove attached ticks with fine tweezers, grasping the tick as close to the skin as possible and pulling firmly. Disinfect the bite with antiseptic and save the tick for future reference. Note the date of the bite on a calendar in case symptoms develop.

Early symptoms of Lyme disease may include a reddish expanding rash at the site of the tick bite and/or flu-like symptoms such as headache, fever, chills, muscle, or joint aches. Anyone developing symptoms following a tick bite should consult a physician promptly.

Also, perform frequent tick checks on your pets, because dogs and other animals can contract Lyme disease. They cannot, however, pass the disease on to humans.

Lyme disease can be treated with antibiotics. In most cases, early treatment will prevent the development of significant cardiac, neurologic, and arthritic problems.

Most tick bites occur from April to October when immature stages of the deer tick are active. Deer ticks are usually found in woods and brushy areas.

For more information on Lyme disease, call your physician, veterinarian, county extension agent, or local or state public health officials.

4-H Natural Resources Camp Set

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Earth Day 1990 is over, but Maryland youngsters age 12 through 18 will have an opportunity to continue their environmental education at the 4-H natural resources summer camp scheduled July 2 through 6.

The camp, sponsored by the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service (MCES), will be held at the Rocks 4-H Camp north of Bel Air in Harford County.

"Our goal is to make learning about the environment fun," said Bob Tjaden, a regional natural resources specialist with MCES. "The camp agenda is based on the planning committee's philosophy of 'tell me, I'll forget; show me, I may remember; but involve me, and I'll understand.'"

Involvement for the campers will include tubing down Deer Creek, exploring wildlife habitats, measuring and determining the age of trees, conducting water quality tests, and hiking to King and Queen Street, an historic landmark.

The youngsters also will investigate a sensitive water quality issue during a role playing game called "Hometown USA." Afterward, they will get a chance to see how a panel of farmers, developers, elected officials, and agency representatives deal with the same issue.

Three field trips, including visits to a wildlife farm, the Conowingo Dam, and a wastewater treatment facility will round out their camping experience.

Contact the 4-H agent at your local cooperative extension service office for more information.

NFU Applauds Decision To Delay BGH

DENVER, Colo. — Leaders of the 250,000 member National Farmers Union (NFU) said the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's decision to postpone the approval of the controversial bovine growth hormone (BGH) shows that concerns surrounding the use of the chemical are serious.

An FDA official announced Monday that a decision on approval of BGH will not be made until at least next spring. Companies seeking approval of the product had predicted that FDA would OK it early this year.

The postponement came shortly after Farmers Union members and representatives of other farm and consumer groups convinced state legislators in Minnesota and Wisconsin to pass measures forbidding BGH use for a period of time, even it is approved.

Farmers Union members from several major dairy producing states have been voicing concerns about the product for months, saying that it would lead to overproduction of dairy goods while consumer worries over the hormone's safety would cause consumption to fall off.

"This delay really exemplifies the power people can have in influencing government decisions," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "BGH is not good news for farmers, consumers, or anybody other than the chemical companies promoting it — and FDA is now realizing that."

A spokesman for the FDA's Center for Veterinary Medicine told a group of farm writers in Washington this week that approval of BGH was being delayed until more data is available on the hormone's effectiveness and its effect on cows injected with it. Independent studies by several researchers have indicated that data provided by the companies that want to produce BGH has not provided clear evidence of its safety for humans or for dairy cows.

The Farmers Union's major concern has regarded the potential economic impacts for farmers if BGH becomes widely used. "We can already produce more milk than we need too, as evidenced by dairy herd buyouts and cheese giveaways in recent years," said Swenson. "Technology that increases the production of a product that can already be overproduced is not a breakthrough at all."

Farmers Union Continues To Oppose BST

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania and New York legislators must be urged to introduce legislation to protect the livelihood of the family farmer and the health and economic well-being of all consumers.

Pennsylvania Farmers Union wishes to commend our Representatives for passing H.R. #190 in October of 1989. This resolution asked for a delay in the commercial sale of bovine somatotropin (BST) until an extensive study could be done to determine the impact it would have on consumers and dairy farmers and on cows that receive the hormone. However, much work still needs to be done by our legislators on both the state and national levels.

Pennsylvania and New York Farmers Union members congratulate the legislators of Wisconsin and Minnesota for passing legislation and further congratulate Governor Tommy Thompson of Wisconsin and Governor Rudy Perpich of Minnesota for signing legislation mandating a moratorium on the sale of milk produced from BST-injected cows.

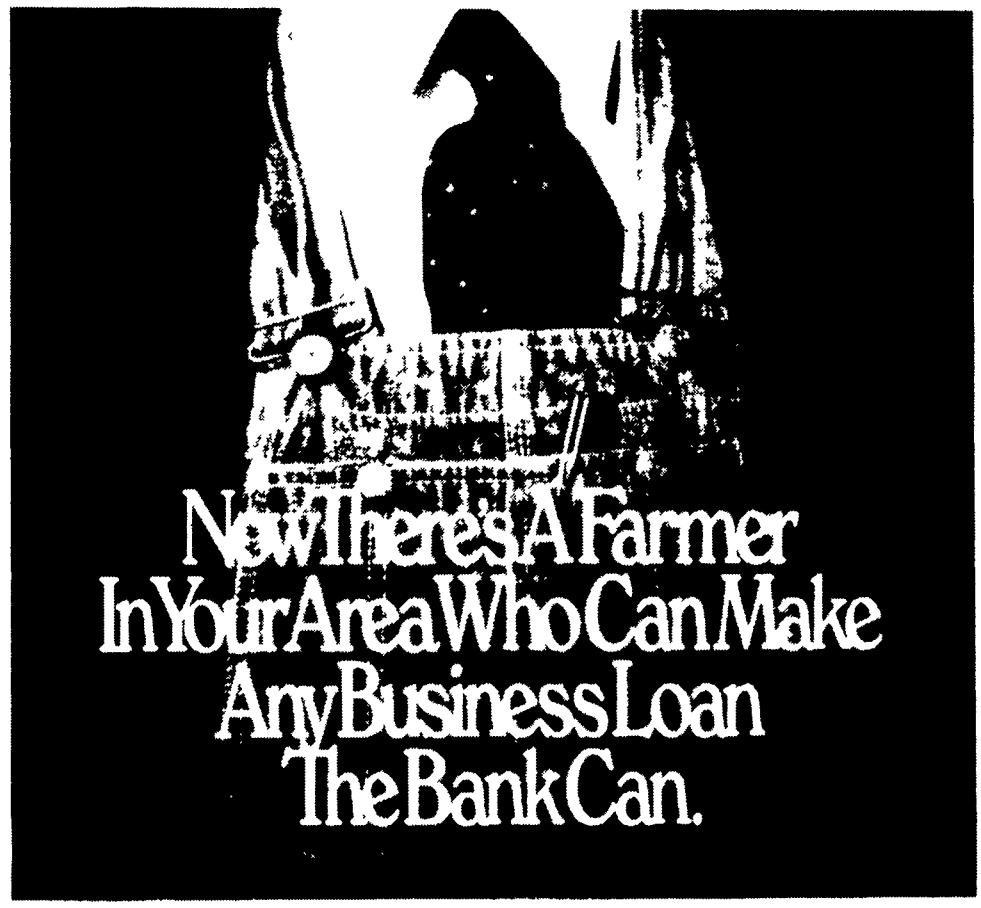
Synthetic BST (also called bovine growth hormone, or BGH) is a genetically engineered version of a cow growth hormone that stimulates increased milk production by up to 25 percent when injected into dairy cows.

Legislation mandating a one-year moratorium on commercial BGH use was signed in Minnesota by Governor Perpich in April. Wisconsin Governor Thompson signed legislation the last week of April that mandates a moratorium on the sale of milk produced from BGH-injected cows. The moratorium will be imposed for a period of one year.

An FDA official announced Monday that a decision on approval of BGH Will Not be made until at least next spring. Companies seeking approval of the product had predicted that the FDA would OK it early this year.

This postponement by the FDA came shortly after the Legislators of Minnesota and Wisconsin banned the sale of milk produced with BGH for a period of time even if BGH did get FDA approval. The FDA's handling of BGH has been widely criticized and is now under investigation by the U.S. General Accounting Office. There have been no independent, publicly funded studies on the long-term health effects of BGH on humans or dairy cows.

"Those states that have enacted legislation to put a moriutorium on the sale of BGH-produced milk must be applauded. More data must be gathered before the health of dairy cows is needlessly placed at risk, causing farmers economic ruin. We need to assure the consuming public that milk will remain a safe and wholesome dairy product," said Bruce Krug, president of Lewis Co. New York Farmers Union.



Since 1917 farmers have taken kindly to Farm Credit because we're owned and controlled by people who really understand your business.

Farmers. Just like yourself. Thing was, we didn't exactly lay out a Sunday dinner spread of loans. Our menu was limited, and we knew it.

So recently we overhauled our lending system. We now offer competitive rates and options for loans we never could offer before.

Adjustable rate mortgages.
Revolving lines of credit.
Variable and fixed rate loans.

Terms of 30 days to 30 years. There's even a variety of services including insurance plans.

Some things do remain the same, however. The Farm Credit loan officer you talk to still makes most of the decisions.

And chances are he can do it faster than most bankers can say "bureaucracy."

So think about this for a moment. Who would you rather deal with for your next loan? A banker who merely wants your business. Or a farmer who knows it.

FARM CREDIT
Nobody knows the field better.

An ad campaign from Farm Credit Banks, Baltimore, Maryland recently won first place in the 1990 National Agri-Marketing Association's nationwide competition. The ad was created by Barker Campbell & Farley Advertising and Public Relations.

Farm Credit Ad Wins National Award

VIRGINIA BEACH, VA — An ad campaign for Farm Credit Banks, Baltimore, MD, has won first place in the 1990 National Agri-Marketing Association's nationwide competition. Created by Barker Campbell & Farley Advertising and Public Relations the campaign was judged the best agricultural four-spread series in the country.

The agency was also named a national finalist for its point-of-purchase ad and black-and-white single-page ad series which were part of the Farm Credit ad campaign.

The ads show that the Farm Credit loan officer is both a farmer who knows banking and a banker who understands farming. In the winning four-color series, black-and-white single-page series and point-of-purchase ads, the bank officer is shown wearing the "uniform" of the farmer, bluejean overalls, while also clad in the banker's pin-striped suit. Another execution shows a youthful loan officer wearing a Future Farmers of America jacket.

"We knew the Farm Credit ads were award-winners right from the drawing board, but it's extremely rewarding to have NAMA label them as the best agricultural ads in America," said Jan Eliassen, account executive for Barker Campbell & Farley.

By winning NAMA's national competition, the agency has reached the highest peak possible for an ad campaign. The ads are running in regional and national magazines, including Lancaster Farming.

Planting Date Critical For Maximum Yields

NEWARK, Del. — Planting date is critical for maximum yields with either full-season or double-cropped soybeans, according to Bob Mulrooney, University of Delaware cooperative extension agent.

"The optimum planting time for full-season soybeans is mid-May to early June, Mulrooney said. "Planting full-season soybeans after early June will cause a reduction in yield. This yield penalty increases as the length of the delay increases. From June 1 to July 1, each week delay in planting will reduce yields by 1 to 2 bushels. After July 1, the yield penalty for delayed planting will be 2 to 3 bushels per week."

Planting date affects other agronomic characteristics as well, the agent notes. Very early-planted beans and late-planted beans will be shorter in height, lodge less, pod lower, and produce fewer branches than beans planted in mid-May. Depending on soil temperature, soil moisture, depth of planting, and soil structure, soybeans will emerge in 5 to 14 days after planting.

Mulrooney cautions farmers against rushing to sow soybeans into cold, wet soil early in the season.

"It is usually better to wait until the soil warms up," he said. "This will favor rapid and uniform emergence, fewer disease problems, and a more uniform stand that can compete with weeds."

Planting date is far more critical for double-cropped beans than for single-cropped beans, the agent notes. Each day delay in planting double-cropped beans may result in a 1/2-bushel yield loss. A key to achieving high yields from double-cropped beans is to plant as early as possible. Mulrooney said the following management practices will allow double-cropped beans to be planted earlier:

- The planting date for double-cropped beans is limited by the harvest date of the preceding crop. Barley can be harvested one to two weeks earlier than winter wheat, thus allowing soybeans to be planted earlier.
- No-till planting into small grain stubble will allow soybeans to be planted earlier and conserve soil moisture as well.
- Both crops can be fertilized before the small grain is planted. This will reduce the preparation time prior to soybean planting.

Independent studies by several researchers have indicated that data provided by the companies that want to produce BGH has not provided clear evidence of its safety for humans or for dairy cows.

"Thanks to the foresight of Legislators like those in Wisconsin and Minnesota and Governors like Thompson and Perpich, the public is protected from the greed of chemical companies that try to get drugs approved for the market before adequate testing is completed," said Allen Deiter, president of Pennsylvania Farmers Union.

Delegates to the National Farmer Union Convention in March approved a resolution calling for a nationwide three-year moratorium on BGH, saying it would allow adequate time for both sides of the issue to be further explored.

Why Compromise? Choose Superiority.

With five Case IH Mower Conditioners to choose from, there's no need to compromise. Now you can select the model that meets your hay harvesting needs exactly.

Every model cuts clean and fast. Continuously engaged rolling action is aggressive when the crop calls for it, yet gentle when you want to save valuable protein-rich leaves. Adjustable full-length rolls on the 8320 and 8330 leave loose fluffy swaths or windrows.

Unique "uniform motion" crank linkage and counter-balanced flywheel make for a smoother-running conditioner with less peak start and stop loads.

Also on the larger models:

- Half-swaybar sickle drive operates at a fast 1700 rpm
- 12-foot cuts produce fast-drying 9-foot swaths for increased productivity
- Wheel assemblies counterbalanced for outstanding vertical/radial flotation
- In-seat hydraulic control of tongue from field to road position

On the 8370 and 8380:

- Center-mounted pivot hitch allows for easy right/left side positioning of header so you can cut from one side of the field
- Hydrostatic header drives eliminate the PTO shaft
- Wide 14- and 16-foot cuts respectively
- Two-sickle system on 8380 cuts at 1800 spm for superior productivity

Wool Pool Update

The directors of the Berks County Sheep and Wool Growers rejected the wool pool bid of 40¢ per pound at the State Wool Sale recently. The directors have met and have reviewed a number of options which will be decided at the annual meeting on May 10th.

The options include

- Not having a Berks County wool pool in 1990.
- Having a pool on June 30 or July 28.
- Having a pool in the fall.
- Wool could be taken to other markets. If a pool is held under #2 and #3, there is no guarantee the price would be higher than the 40¢ bid received at the state sale.

If a pool is held later this year, it is essential that wool be stored properly.

Animal Rightists Use New Tactic

Reports from California note animal rights activists are turning to law enforcement officials to execute their program. The California Cattlemen's Association relates that four of its members were cited by the Los Angeles Department of Animal Control for failure to provide their cattle with "shelter and protection from the weather." The citations carry up to a $5,000 fine and jail if the offense is found to be willful.

PA. Hampshire Field Day

For anyone interested in Hampshires, the annual field day will be held on:

Date: May 19, 1990; Time: 10:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m.; Place: Blu-Acre Farm, home of the Brubaker and Fleener families near Robesonia; Program: Judging contest, marketing lamb and breeding lamb evaluation, breed association meeting, and speakers on health issues; Lunch: Sandwiches and drink will be provided. Please bring covered dish, place setting and chairs.

Beware Of Toxoplasmosis

Lots of cats and confined sheep (ewes and feeder lambs) do not mix well, especially when cats seek the warmth of a hay feeder and the convenience of ground feed as a substitute sand box.

A couple reports have indicated the possibility of sheep abortions because of toxoplasmosis parasite. For a ewe to abort from toxoplasmosis, she must contract it when she is pregnant. After the first infection, the ewe will not abort again, even if reinfected.

Symptoms include loss of appetite, weakness, difficult breathing with stillborn, or birth of weak lambs. In young lambs, much the same symptoms occur, but some muscular incoordination and subsequent death can result, primarily from starvation.

Sheep contract toxoplasmosis by eating oocysts, the egg-like form of the parasite, in contaminated feed or water. Cats are the only animals known to pass the parasite in their feces. They contract the parasite from eating other infected animals.

No effective vaccine or cure for toxoplasmosis is known.

To prevent the disease, reduce the amount of toxoplasmosis by avoiding contamination of sheep feed and water with cat feces, and by preventing cats from eating raw meat.

Pregnancy-Testing Ewes

Several methods of pregnancy testing ewes have been evaluated at the experiment station of Dubois, Idaho. Some of these methods are available to sheep producers now. Others could be available soon.

A. Pregmatic 3:

The Pregmatic 3 is a simple and affordable ultrasonic device that could be used by any properly trained technician. The overall accuracy of the device is 97 percent when it is used in mature ewes at day-51 or later of gestation. Some studies have shown the error rate to be as high as 52 percent if ewes are tested before day-60 of pregnancy. Accuracy is directly related to the gestation stage at which the animals are tested.

B. Real-Time Ultrasonic Scanning:

An accuracy of 100 percent has been reported with this device when ewes are tested between 36 and 93 days of gestation. This method is also quite accurate in diagnosing twins or triplets. The main problem with this device is its cost. Nevertheless, a wool pool or other organization could purchase the device and hire a technician. The cost per producer and per ewe could be minimized in this manner.

C. PSPB (Pregnancy-specific protein B) blood testing:

PSPB has been isolated from bovine placental membranes. A valid, sensitive radioimmunoassay has been developed to measure PSPB in bovine blood and has been shown to be a reliable test for pregnancy testing cows. This test has been adapted for use in sheep and has proven to be 100 percent accurate in ewes after day-30 of gestation. The test also shows some promise in detecting twins or triplets. At the present time, the procedure is to take a blood sample from each ewe and send it to the lab. It is anticipated that in the future the PSPB test will be conducted by placing a dipstick or test strip into a few drops of blood and observing a color change.

Pregnancy testing in large commercial flocks may be impractical. Nevertheless, there are several large commercial operations north of Utah that are pregnancy testing ewe lambs on a regular basis. In addition, pregnancy rates in older ewes are reasonably high. However, rates in flocks of ewe lambs are often near or less than 50 percent. Pregnancy testing may not be economically important in the former case, but in the latter there may be a considerable advantage. An owner could cull non-pregnant ewe lambs early and still sell them at lamb prices. If the owner waits until after the lambing season, the animals must be sold at ewe prices and the advantage is not realized.

NCGA, Others Oppose Payment Limitations

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and other agricultural organizations recently asked Congress to reject any new attempts to target farm program benefits or impose new means tests for program participants.

"Such efforts to limit payments would prove to be damaging to those who are intended beneficiaries — the typical commercial-sized family farm — and would render our farm programs ineffective," the groups said in a letter to members of both the House and Senate Agriculture Committees.

Rep. Dick Armey (D-TX) has proposed ending program payments for farmers with adjusted gross incomes of $100,000 or more. The House Agriculture Committee will also consider a form of targeting — a 40,000 bushel limit on indexed target prices for corn proposed by Rep. Tim Penny (D-MN).

The groups argued against Armey's proposal because:

- Gross income does not necessarily correlate with profitability.
- Income measures will affect producers of commodities such as livestock differently from crop producers.
- This type of limit will discourage diversification of the farming operation at a time when much of the policy direction for consideration and environmental purposes would enourage more integrated production practices.
- Large producers who are forced out of the program will grow additional quantities of these crops and disrupt the production adjustment objectives of the program. Those still in the program will pay the cost in terms of higher set-aside requirements.

Co-signing the letter with NCGA were the American Farm Bureau Federation, American Soybean Association, National Association of Wheat Growers, National Cattlemen's Association, National Cotton Council, National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, National Milk Producers Federation, National Pork Producers Council, and Rice Growers Legislative Group.

Program Clues Ag Students Into Careers

NEWARK, Del. — From the day a student enrolls in college to the day diplomas are handed out, one question continues to surface — what happens after graduation? A new program initiated this spring at the University of Delaware's College of Agricultural Sciences responds to the question.

"Uncover a Clue to Your Future" is a program that provides an opportunity for students to meet and talk on an informal basis with representatives from a wide variety of agriculturally related industries and graduate school representatives.

Similar programs are offered for other majors at the University of Delaware. But the idea to focus on a program specifically for agricultural sciences majors was developed by Karen Roth, assistant to the dean of instruction in the college of agricultural sciences, and Stephen Sciscione, associate director of the university's career planning and placement office.

"The program was planned as an exploration program, not a job fair," said Roth. "We wanted to provide an opportunity for students in the agricultural sciences to establish a network of contacts and to gather information that may lead to future employment."

Most hiring, explained Sciscione, is done by personal contacts established through this method, known as networking. A person-to-person exchange provides greater potential for job offers than simply answering want ads and employment notices.

Roth, who is responsible for developing and carrying out agricultural sciences recruitment programs, said the networking program is a valuable recruiting tool.

"It's one thing to decide upon a particular area of study as a freshman and another to know what opportunities are available after graduation," she said. "We developed the career planning program because we want students to explore, discover, and focus on future plans."

Roth's fall schedule is filled with telephone calls, letters, and visits to high school science and agriculture teachers throughout Delaware and other mid-Atlantic states. She offers information and requests to speak to interested students. Students generally apply and are deciding which school to attend by spring. That's when the focus of Roth's work turns to leading tours for prospective students and their parents.

"The agenda of the tours is left up to the students and their parents," said Roth. "Some are interested in meeting faculty, attending a class, or simply seeing the campus. There are lots of questions about academic studies, and with the networking program, we can point to a specific effort to connect studies with future opportunities."

For further information on the University of Delaware and the College of Agricultural Sciences, contact the College of Agricultural Sciences, 133 Townsend Hall, Newark, DE 19717-1303.

Any Fauna In This Flora?

Several hundred area high school students visited Alfred State College this spring for "Education and Career Day," hosted by faculty and students in the college's School of Agriculture and Allied Health Technologies.

Coordinator was Ronald D. Stutzman, associate professor and chairman of the plant and animal science department. In his letter of invitation to high schools, he described the demonstrations and exhibits to be viewed at "Education and Career Day," and noted that in no other areas of study are there more opportunities of employment as there are in the professional area of agriculture.

Penn State's New Ag Curriculum Discussed At BCCA Meeting

READING (Berks Co.)— The Berks County Cattlemen's Association (BCCA) held its quarterly information meeting on Saturday, April 21, 1990, at Penn State Berks Campus' Janssen Conference Center.

Following a brief directors meeting, the agenda included an update by Campus Executive Officer Dr. Fred Gaige and Dr. David Sanford, assistant professor of horticulture at the university, on the planned agricultural curriculum which will be offered at this local Penn State branch.

Dr. Gaige noted that Penn State plans a food science and horticulture emphasis on courses offered at this location. He noted the location at Berks Campus is ideally suited for College of Agriculture students because of its proximity to the city of Reading and surrounding rural Berks County, with its productive and diverse agriculture.

Gaige noted today's Penn State agriculture students are predominantly from non-farm backgrounds. Eighty percent of the ag students come from urban or suburban areas. He quickly added that those students who come to Penn State from the farm will benefit from the Berks Campus' smaller, more intimate class size.

Gaige said he is hopeful the new agriculture opportunities at the Berks Campus, which will allow more "hands-on" experience earlier in each student's college career, will help to stop the migration of Pennsylvania students to other agricultural schools.

Gaige asked for the local agricultural community to support Penn State in its effort to provide this opportunity for students to study agriculture at Berks. He noted the Capital Campaign for building student housing, expanding present lecture facilities and laboratories, etc., has come close to reaching its $2 million goal. The last $100,000 is the hardest to achieve, he said.

Sanford pointed out Penn State Berks' efforts to offer the same courses by 1992 that would be taken during the first two years at University Park for any student studying agriculture. Additional staffing will focus on professors who can teach agronomy, animal science, soil science, and other subjects. According to Sanford, the school will be concentrating on horticulture and food science majors, since these areas are currently in demand. There are 5 to 10 job opportunities per graduate, he noted.

Along with offering courses for bachelor degrees in agriculture, Sanford said the university is contemplating offering associate degrees and certificate programs in agriculture.

"Here at Berks Campus, we are taking the pressure off University Park in horticulture and food science majors since this represents the College of Agriculture's largest enrollment," said Gaige. "We have chosen to put the emphasis on ag business rather than ag production, which differs from what former dean of the college Sam Smith had envisioned five years ago when the university began serious discussions of an expanded agriculture curriculum at Berks Campus."

Dr. Smith left Penn State in 1985 to become president of Washington State University. Eventually, Dr. Lamartine Hood assumed the dean's position at the college, and realized the 1987 purchase of the farm adjacent to the Penn State Berks Campus.

The working-farm concept envisioned by Smith for the Berks Campus has since been rerouted to a program that offers more agribusiness, and probably will never offer a four-year agricultural degree. Gaige explained it would be cost prohibitive to try to duplicate the experts on staff at the main campus in order to provide the requirements of a four-year degree.

Next on the agenda was Packers and Stockyards Administrations' Durwood Helms of Lancaster. Helms, who was raised on a 375-acre southeast Alabama livestock farm, became supervisor of the Lancaster region for this branch of the United States

The Berks County Cattlemen's Association quarterly information meeting featured an update on the Penn State Berks Campus agricultural curriculum by Dr. Fred Gaige, campus executive officer, left, and Dr. Dave Sanford, assistant professor of horticulture, seated right. Durwood Helms, regional supervisor of the USDA Packers and Stockyards Administration, seated center, provided information on livestock sellers' rights to prompt and fair payment.

Department of Agriculture in 1987. He explained the primary mission of P & S is to assure fair competition through its investigative and law enforcement charge. The agency was created by the federal government in 1921 in order to break up a monopoly of meat packers who were controlling market prices for meat and livestock.

Helms noted there are 12 regional offices of P & S Administration nationwide, with between 185 and 190 employees. His Lancaster region covers nine northeast states with seven field investigators to regulate 3,300 different firms that are subject to interstate commerce trade laws. These include stockyards, livestock auctions, commission firms, order buyers, dealers, meat packers, brokers, distributors, and wholesalers.

Payment protection for the producer is a major part of his agency's responsibilities, said Helms. Auction markets, packers, and dealers are required to pay for livestock by the close of business on the day after possession is transferred -- generally two business days. For carcass sales where payment is based on dressed grade, payment is required by the end of the next business day after the final purchase price is determined. Any other payment plan must be agreed to in writing by the seller prior to the sale.

Packers and stockyards ensures payment protection by requiring bonding and trust accounts by auctions and packers. A seller has 30 calendar days to notify P & S if payment is not received if sufficient funds are not available to cover the check received. Each seller must file a case against the offending business in civil court, since P & S cannot file on their behalf. Helms noted court cases have been decided which have set the precedent for sellers to receive legal fees and interest on unpaid livestock sales.

Helms concluded by noting P & S is also involved in regulating predatory pricing, weight, and price manipulation, commercial bribery, and illegal brokerage. For more information, write or call USDA Packers and Stockyards Administration, 1860 Charter Lane, Suite E, Lancaster, PA 17601, (717) 299-6313, or contact Sheila Miller, president of the BCCA, (215) 589-5617.

Upcoming events planned by the BCCA include a summer field trip to Virginia cattle country on July 21-22; beef promotion at the Scenic River Festival at Reading from July 25-29 and the Reading Fair in September; Dutch Country Calf Sale on October 27, 1990, at the Lebanon Fairgrounds; and an annual membership banquet in October.

Blessington Becomes Extension Director

COLLEGE PARK, Md.— University of Maryland graduate Dr. Thomas M. Blessington will become a regional extension director and head of the Western Maryland Research and Education Center on June 1.

Blessington, 43, will be responsible for operating the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station's 546-acre research facility located near Keedysville.

As Region 1 extension director, he will be the administrator in charge of four regional specialists located at the center, as well as seven cooperative extension service offices in the counties of Garrett, Washington, Alleghany, Carroll, Baltimore, Frederick, and Harford.

"Dr. Blessington's educational background and unique training make him ideally suited for this new administrative assignment," said Dr. Craig Oliver, director of the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service. "Under his leadership, the extension service will meet the challenges and needs of western Maryland citizens in our rapidly changing society."

Dr. Thomas M. Blessington

"We are especially pleased with Dr. Blessington's management experience at the academic department and regional center level," said Dr. Robert Kennedy, director of the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station. "His extensive background of dealing with capital construction is important as we continue our over-$1 million building program at the Western Maryland Center. And his horticultural background makes him an excellent choice for overseeing our research benefiting western Maryland agriculture."

Blessington earned his bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degrees in horticulture from the University of Maryland at College Park. His doctoral and current research focus is on developing post-production systems for interior ornamentals.

He is a former professor and plant science department head at the Univesity of Nevada, and was resident director of the Texas A&M University's Agricultural Research and Extension Center in Weslaco, TX, before returning to Maryland.

"My career has progressed through agricultural support, teaching, and research to now include an active role in administrative leadership and management," said Blessington. "I look forward to providing leadership and management for the people and programs of the Western Maryland Research and Education Center, the Agricultural Experiment Station, and Cooperative Extension Service."

The Western Maryland Research and Education Center was established by the Agricultural Experiment Station in 1984. Supporting the diverse agricultural segments of Western Maryland, research at the center includes fruit cultivar and rootstock trials, integrated pest management, and biocontrol studies.

Before Planting, Observe Weather Predictions

EDWARD J. WOODS
County Agent

Stay Off Wet Ground

Don't let spring fever get the better of your good judgement. As you yearn to get into the fields and gardens, remember what you are trying to accomplish. You want seeds to germinate rapidly and seedlings to emerge quickly. The longer it takes for this to happen, the greater the opportunity is for disease and insects to attack, weaken, or destroy the seed and planting.

Follow weather predictions closely and delay planting until soil moisture and temperature conditions are favorable for good germination, and until the risk of frost injury has passed. To prevent soil compaction and surface crusting, don't work soils when they are too wet.

Control Weeds In Pastures

A variety of weeds will grow in pastures — some may even provide some nutrition to livestock. One weed that is a problem for dairy cows on pasture is wild garlic or onion because of the flavor it gives milk.

That flavor is a less than desirable for many people. Both can be controlled along with many other broadleaf weeds by the use of Banvel or 2,4-D or a combination of these materials.

Treatment should be done in advance of the pasture season with careful consideration for the number of days between the application of the herbicide and the start of pasturing. According to the Pennsylvania "Agronomy Guide, 1989-1990" the following restrictions apply; 2,4-D Amine, 7 days for dairy cows; 2,4-D Ester, 7 days for all livestock; and Banvel, 7 days if less than 1 pint per acre is used, up to 60 days if over 4 pints is used for lactating dairy animals. Always read and follow all label directions when applying pesticides.

Grass Tetany Warning

Washington County cattlemen should be alert for signs of grass tetany. This disease of early pasture usually attacks milking dairy cows and beef cows nursing young calves. It is caused by deficiency of magnesium and early signs may be trembling or twitching of the muscles. Severely affected cattle may die suddenly with violent convulsions.

When the disease occurs, addition of magnesium oxide at the rate of 1/2 oz. to 1 oz. per cow daily as a supplement to the ration is good for prevention. Add magnesium oxide to the grain mix or top dress the silage fed daily. It will also pay to feed cows on early pasture at least 3 to 5 pounds of good legume or mixed legume hay.

A good insurance is to supply a complete salt-mineral mix containing at least 10 percent magnesium, 10 percent phosphorus, and 13 percent calcium. Make sure cattle are consuming at least two ounces of mix per day. If consumption is below this level, try adding 20 percent bran, dry molasses or ground oats to the mix. There are also commercial molasses-mineral blocks formulated to prevent tetany using one block per 15 cows.

Long-term prevention of grass tetany requires addition of dolomitic limestone to soils to improve magnesium content, but this method may require 3 years. In the meantime, magnesium oxide supplementation is good insurance against a disease problem which can be very expensive.

For Crop Insurance, Congress Should Consider Free Market

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Crop insurance officals are urging Congress to choose a free-market approach to reforming the federal crop insurance program.

The American Association of Crop Insurers (AACI), whose membership writes about 75 percent of the multiple peril crop insurance protection in the U.S., is supporting legislation (HR4592) that would 1) be budget responsible; 2) provide structural reform of the program; 3) provide improved coverage plans for farmers; and 4) be cost-effective.

A centerpiece of this proposal would provide for the program to be under the direction and leadership of a newly established independent federal crop insurance commissioner who would be required to have insurance expertise, said E. Eugene Gantz, AACI president.

Two AACI officials told a House agriculture subcommittee that this approach would 1) provide steady, experienced, and independent leadership for the program; 2) result in the development of new and improved insurance products on a competitive basis in the marketplace; 3) would be cost-effective and within budget limits; 4) would require the private companies to bear most of the underwriting risk; and 5) would be affordable to farmers. Richard Gibson, AACI board chairman, said that would result in a crop insurance program that more farmers would buy because it would meet their risk management needs.

John Joyce, AACI board vice chairman, also appeared before the subcommittee and reinforced the free market position.

"HR 4592 is the best bill to surface the date. It's bipartisan and provides a good framework for an improved crop insurance program for both farmers and taxpayers. Furthermore, it generally meets the criteria established by AACI and most other insurance organizations," Gantz said.

Another bill the subcommittee is considering essentially would give the federal government a larger role in delivering a crop insurance program and diminish the role of the private crop insurance industry.

Major considerations, said Gantz, are that any crop insurance bill be within budget parameters, provide for structural reform of the crop insurance program, and result in better products for farmers and be cost effective.

Using the concept contained in HR 4592 as a starting point, said Gantz, "a strong, reliable crop insurance program can be developed. If the private insurance industry is given the chance to complete the job we started in 1981 (when the current program began), we are certain that a much improved crop insurance program can and will deliver the kind of protection farmers need."

FARM MANAGEMENT

HOW TO PRESERVE FARMLAND?

Roland P. Freund
Farm Management Agent

Many farmers wish to continue to till the best soils in Pennsylvania. The majority of the state's voters in 1987 agreed that something should be done to enable them to do just that. So they authorized the commonwealth to float a $100 million bond issue. We now have county boards being formed to administer the new farmland preservation program which the legislature authorized.

With all the emotion and political activity going on, it seems prudent that farm managers examine the facts and understand the issues. In a series of articles in this column, we shall attempt to cover the major concerns that are facing farmers who consider applying for a conservation easement.

Why is prime land lost? Pressures on land spreads out through our rural areas from the New York-Washington megalopolis. This tideswell for change meets little resistance because of the economic and political circumstances of our rural communities, where:

a. The returns from crop production are low. In a normal crop rotation, we are lucky if we can earn $50 per acre per year as return to land.

b. Farmers can get a very attractive gain when they sell land to the highest bidder. There is a strong demand for prime agricultural land, which is also the easiest to develop.

c. Landowners have a great deal of liberty and the rights to do as they wish with the land they own. Pennsylvania has been very careful to protect these rights.

d. Development in the form of home building faces very little challenge in most communities. Even industrial construction is normally controlled by the lowest level of local government — the township.

Under these circumstances, it is perhaps surprising that we are not seeing a faster pace of farmland loss.

How do other countries preserve farmland? In Europe, where people have starved in this century, national policies dictates some self-sufficiency in food. It is a false assumption to say that it is achieved through subsidized agriculture.

In Australia, there is very little agricultural subsidy and a population not much greater than Pennsylvania's. Yet on that continent, which is the size of mainland U.S.A., construction is restricted by law to designated areas of towns, suburbs, and cities.

Countries which preserve farmland also require that property owners maintain, preserve, and restore the inner city and the suburban and the small town environments. Failure to do this leads to the flight to the country.

Earlier Pennsylvania laws

Farmland preservation is not a new idea. In 1968, Act 247 as ammended gave authority for agricultural zoning. In the same year, Act 442 provided for the purchase of development rights.

In 1974, Act 319 — the so-called "Clean and Green Act" — gave landowners the option to use an agricultural value and thus reduce real estate taxes. This is being used extensively where reassessment raised taxes on farmland.

Act 43 of 1981 — the Agricultural Area Security Act — enabled farmers to join together to form "Agricultural Security Areas."

The 1982, Act 133 — "Right-to-Farm" — was designed to protect farmers from "nuisance" suits.

These laws have prepared the way for the new program of selling conservation easements. How this process works and how it might impact farm families who sell easements will be covered in this series.

Subjects to be covered in future articles include:

- Agricultural security areas.
- Conservation easements.
- Farm-use value.
- Family considerations.
- Tax implications.
- Long-term financial impact.

Watch for these articles and contact your local cooperative extension office for more information on farmland preservation.

Bussen Earns Honorable Mention

FORT ATKINSON, Wis. — Steve Bussen of Monsanto Agricultural Company in Ephrata, Pennsylvania captured Honorable Mention in the 1990 Hoard's Dairyman Cow Judging Contest for agri-marketers.

Bussen competed against almost 1,200 contestants and had a score of 464 out of a possible 500.

For his achievement, he received a specially good longhorn of Hoard's Dairyman cheddar cheese and an attractive walnut wall plaque, plus national publicity.

"Hoard's Dairyman," the national dairy farm magazine, has sponsored a pictoral cow judging contest for its readers for 60 years. Bussen placed in a special division for agribusiness men and women.

Beef Expo Draws 7,000

RICHMOND, Va.— The 1990 Virginia Beef Expo held on April 27-28 at the Rockingham County Fairgrounds resulted in the sale of more than $560,000 in seed stock cattle, according to Joe Meek, expo manager.

Three hundred and four head of purebred cattle were sold at an average of $1,855 a head. The two-day event drew an estimated 7,000 people.

Eight major breeds of cattle were featured at the Expo, including Angus, Charolais, Limousin, Polled Hereford, Red Angus, Shorthorn, Salers, and Simmental. It was the first event of its type to be held in Virginia, and drew buyers from throughout the East Coast.

The cattle industry is the single largest agricultural industry in Virginia, with cash receipts totaling $419,693,000 in 1988. Virginia ranks 21st nationally among cattle producers, with an inventory estimated at more than 1,700,000 head of cattle. Of this number, there are approximately 39,000 purebred cattle in Virginia.

In addition to the sale of purebred cattle, the Expo also featured events of interest to the whole family, including a black tie, Celebrity Beef Cook-off, a working cattle dog demonstration, a cattle working rodeo contest, a team roping/cutting horse demonstration, a trade show, and an "all-you-can-eat" beef food festival featuring the Wildwood Girls bluegrass band.

Winners of the Celebrity Beef Cook-off were John Huston, president of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, in first place; in second place, Robert Wilcox, president, Lukhard's Finer Foods, Inc. and past chairman of the board for the Virginia Food Dealers Association; and William Groseclose, chairman of the advisory council for the Harrisonburg and Rockingham Convention and Visitors Bureau in third place. Tied for fourth place were Virginia State Sen. Frank Nolen; Reginald Reynolds, executive secretary of the Virginia Cattlemen's Association; S. Mason Carbaugh, commissioner of the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services; Carlton Courter, president of the Virginia Agribusiness Council; Chrys Peterson, news anchor with WHSV-TV3. The winners donated their cash prizes to three charities, including $3,000 to the Virginia Cattle Drive For Hunger; $800 to the American Heart Association; and $600 to the Ronald McDonald House.

The judges for the Celebrity Beef Cook-off included Caroline Mayer, staff writer with The Washington Post; Louis Mahoney, food editor of The Richmond News Leader; Manfred E. Roehr, treasurer of the Virginia Chefs' Association and manager of Shields Tavern in Colonial Williamsburg; Craig Moore, owner and chef of the Joshua Wilton House in Harrisonburg; and Shaun Hunt, director of purchasing, Sutton Place Gourmet in Washington, Virginia, and Maryland.

Herbicide In Tablet Form

WILMINGTON, Del. — Du Pont Agricultural Products will test market a new soybean herbicide in tablet form this spring, the "Pinnacle Agtab."

About the size of a silver dollar, the "Agtab" — short for agricultural tablet — reacts in water much the same way as seltzer tablets.

"Effervescent tablet technology is available now," said Ran Langille, Du Pont sales manager for "Pinnacle" soybean herbicide. "Pinnacle Agtab combines weed control power with the latest in handling and measuring ease," said Langille. "It is the size of a silver dollar, and when dropped in water, the Agtab disperses in much the same fashion as a seltzer tablet.

"As a self-dispersing herbicide, Pinnacle Agtab has a great deal to offer farmers and the environment," Langille said. "It is premeasured, so there is no waste, no dust or liquid splash. Spill recovery is easy because you can just pick up a dropped Agtab or part of one."

The test marketing will be conducted in several Midwestern states, as Du Pont seeks farmers' reaction to Agtab formulation. "When the Agtab becomes wet, a reaction between citric acid and sodium bicarbonate takes place to produce carbon dioxide, which breaks the tablet apart."

"Agtab will completely disperse in 2-1/2 to 3-1/2 minutes without agitation in water that is approximately 50 degrees F," said David Jackisch, Du Pont formulations researcher. It takes three to five minutes for an Agtab to disperse in very cold water (34 to 36 degrees F).

Du Pont is test marketing the Pinnacle "Agtab," a new effervescent tablet formulation of Pinnacle soybean herbicide. The Agtab (short for agricultural tablet) reacts in water to self-disperse. Pinnacle Agtab targets the same tough weeds as Pinnacle DF, including lambsquarters, velvetleaf, annual smartweed, and pigweed.

One tablet contains enough "Pinnacle" to treat four acres at a 1/4-ounce-per-acre rate. "Each Agtab is scored into four quarters to allow exact, one-acre measurement," said Jackisch. "The tablet breaks cleanly in halves or quarters when pressure is simultaneously applied to both sides of the break line."

Five Agtabs are packaged in a plastic bottle; one bottle treats 20 acres. The bottle is foil-sealed and contains a drying agent in the bottom. Six bottles are contained in each carton.

Pinnacle Agtab targets the same tough weeds as Pinnacle DF, including lambsquarters, velvetleaf, annual smartweed and pigweed. Like Pinnacle DF, Pinnacle Agtab can be tank-mixed with other herbicides, such as Du Pont "Classic" for broader-spectrum weed control.

"The Agtab tablets can be added to the spray tank at any time," said Jackisch. "If they are thrown into an empty tank, they will completely disperse long before the tank is filled with water." Jackisch recommends that if other products are to be added to the tank, the Agtab tablets should be put in first, as some emulsifiable concentrates and surfactants may affect the breakup time of the tablets.

Pinnacle is a member of the sulfonylurea family of chemistry discovered by Du Pont more than a decade ago. Sulfonylurea herbicides are used at very low use rates — fractions of an ounce of active ingredient per acre.

"Du Pont has strict guidelines for product development to ensure that its new products follow The Du Pont Company's vision of producing environmentally compatible products in a working partnership with nature," said Langille. "Pinnacle Agtab and Pinnacle DF do just that, as these herbicides are easy on the people who use them and are compatible with the environment."

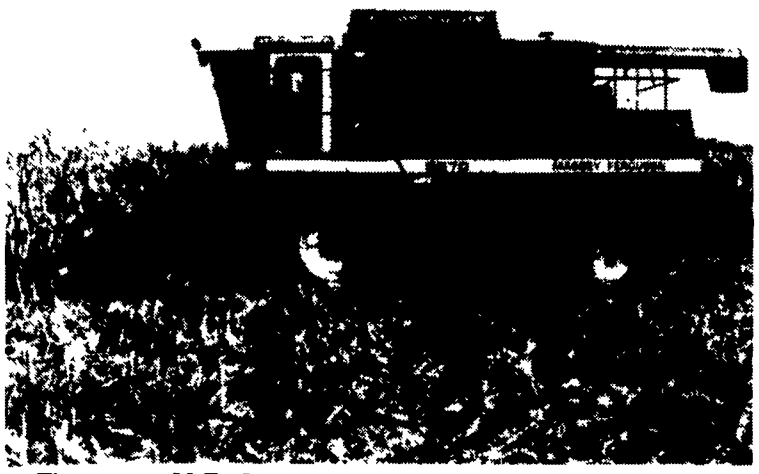
DES MOINES, Iowa — Massey Ferguson has introduced a new lineup of agricultural products for the 1990s. Dealers across North America got therir first look at new M-F combines, tractors, and implements at a series of regional meetings.

The new M-F 8570 rotary combine received tremendous attention from dealers at the meetings. "We have been out of the combine business for a few years and we are pleased to be back in it," said David Pitt, president, Massey-Ferguson Inc. "With the addition of this rotary combine to our product line, Massey-Ferguson will be the only company in North America offering both conventional and rotary combines to meet the needs of farmers."



The new M-F 8570 rotary combine from Massey-Ferguson features a 220-hp engine and 227-bushel grain tank capacity.

Steve McDaniel, vice president marketing for Massey-Ferguson, said, "Sales of self-propelled combines were up 60 percent in 1989 from the previous year, and we are projecting another 21 percent increase this year."

Tractor sales have also been trending higher, according to McDaniel, especially in the 100-horsepower range. "Sales of bigger horsepower tractors were up 25 percent in 1989 from the previous year. We project that figure will be up another 17 to 20 percent for 1990," McDaniel said.

Dealer interest was also very high toward the new lineup of 100-plus horsepower Massey-Ferguson tractors, featuring a new technologically-advanced Perkins 1000 Series diesel engine with Quadram power that offers increased torque, improved fuel economy, longer life, and quieter operation.

Pitt noted that Massey-Ferguson has been in business for 142 years, and, "During this time we have been through several severe farm depressions and survived them all. We have also retained the distinction of being the world's largest manufacturer of tractors for 28 consecutive years." According to Pitt, about one of every five tractors sold in the world is a Massey-Ferguson tractor.

Massey-Ferguson's complete product lineup for the 1990s includes:

- 54 tractor models from 16 to 160 horsepower.
- Large tractors (69 to 160 horsepower) with exclusive computer-controlled functions and electronic three-point hitch for increased productivity.
- New 100 horsepower ag tractors powered by new Perkins 1000 Series diesel engines with Quadram power.
- Three new conventional combines that meet the needs of both large and small acreage farmers.

A new rotary combine available in corn/soybean, small grain, or rice configurations.

- A 375 or 390 horsepower, four-wheel-drive, articulated tractor.

101 implements that match the depth, breadth, and quality of the tractor line, including a hay tool line with round and square balers and self-propelled and pull-type swathers.

Pitt expressed the Company's view for the future. He said, "We have a quality product line and after-sale support system for customers that will ensure a strong position for our dealers and our company throughout this decade and beyond."

Guide Alerts Growers

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)— Public concern over pesticide residues in food has resulted in rapid change in chemical product availability and regulation. The latest edition of Penn State's Tree Fruit Production Guide will alert growers to the changes and introduce new pest management practices that can be incorporated into their program.

"Many fruit growers, extension agents, and industry consultants are interested in knowing more about how to minimize their use of pesticides," said Dr. James Travis, associate professor of plant pathology and one of 16 scientists who contributed to the new edition. Integrated pest management (IPM) is one of the guiding concepts behind this year's revision, which provides new information on pesticide use, weed control, and orchard management.

A new section, "Farm Management," describes state and federal laws that apply to Pennsylvania fruit producers, hiring consultants, wage and withholding facts, worker and community safety, and special employement concerns. Addresses and phone numbers of the appropriate government agencies are provided.

Also new to the guide are fact sheets, illustrated with color photographs, which are helpful for identifying and controlling 32 of Pennsylvania's major weeds.

The guide is published by Penn State's College of Agriculture and sells for $12. To place an order, contact your county extension office or the Publications Distribution Center, 112 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802.

Protect And Conserve Groundwater

By Robert E. Leiby and David L. Dunbar
Lehigh Co. Cooperative
Extension Office

Without a fresh supply of water, we would die in only a few days. To keep functioning, the human body needs approximately 2½ quarts of water a day. Some of this water comes from food, but six to eight glasses of pure liquid are needed to make up the balance.

The average person in an American home uses from 20 to 80 gallons of water each day for activities such as drinking, cooking, bathing, washing clothes and dishes, flushing toilets, and watering lawns and gardens. Although our use of water continues to increase, the total quantity of water available for use remains the same.

Water covers 75 percent of the earth's surface. Despite this abundance, all but three percent is seawater. Three percent isn't much, but it's all we've had since the beginning of time. Water recycles over and over as rain or snow falls to earth, percolates into the ground, or evaporates into the atmosphere and returns again to earth.

Because of the very large amount of water in ground storage, there is no overall shortage. There are, however, many problems of local and regional supply because needed water is not always in the right place at the right time or it is not of the right quality. The demand for water continues to increase as more people use more water in more ways every day.

The widespread availability of groundwater in most parts of the country, its dependability in times of drought, and its relatively high quality have led to an increase in groundwater withdrawals of nearly 190 percent in the past 30 years.

Groundwater is one of the nation's most valuable resources, and many find it one of the most difficult to understand. Once contaminated, water may remain contaminated for generations. Yet we must rely on it for survival. It provides 35 percent of the fresh water withdrawn for municipal water supplies, 97 percent of rural drinking water, 40 percent of irrigation water, and about 26 percent of the water used by industry, excluding thermoelectric power uses. Groundwater is now the source of drinking water for more than 50 percent of the population.

Recycling and conserving water and protecting it from contamination will be essential if the economy is to expand, agricultural production is to be maintained, and cities are to have adequate water supplies for new residents and new industries. Though 90 percent of water supplied to industries and homes is available for reuse, only half of the water withdrawn for agriculture is returned. More widespread adoption of water-saving systems will help sustain irrigated agriculture where water supplies are diminishing. It will also curb ecological damage to overtaxed rivers and streams.

We must carefully conserve and protect our water resources to assure an adequate and safe supply of water for future use. Our children and grandchildren are depending on it.

Alfalfa Cutting Management

Cutting management is an important tool in achieving high quality, high yields, and stand persistence. It also can be effective in reducing the impact of weed, insect, and disease pests.

Harvest schedules will depend somewhat on the quality goals of the producer. Progressive dairy farmers have recognized the economic importance of producing high quality forage and will often cut early in order to obtain greater than 20 percent crude protein, less than 30 percent acid detergent fiber, and less than 40 percent neutral detergent fiber. Such high-quality forage has the potential to increase forage dry matter intake and milk production while decreasing the requirement for grain.

For high quality alfalfa, make the first cutting at mid- to full bud stage, as long as:

- Better adapted varieties with multiple pest resistance are used.
- Adequate levels of lime, phosphorus, and potassium are maintained.
- Insect pests are monitored and controlled.

Cutting pre- or early-bud alfalfa is not recommended because there is a higher risk of losing the stand. Also, fiber levels may be undesirably low when cut extremely early.

If an alfalfa stand has been weakened by winter stress, make the first cutting at early- to mid-bloom stage.

Generally, summer cuttings are permitted to reach early-bloom (approximately 35 days between cuttings). The average cutting intervals between first and second cuts and second and third cuts, for producers in the Pennsylvania Alfalfa Growers Program who made four or more cuts per year, was 37 and 33 days, respectively. The crude protein values of the second and third harvests were 18.6 percent and 20.6 percent, respectively, and acid detergent fiber values, 37.0 percent and 31.3 percent, respectively.

If properly harvested and stored, alfalfa silage can provide a high-quality forage with less risk of damage to weather. For high-quality silage, field wilt to a moisture content of 60 to 70 percent moisture before ensiling for conventional upright, bunk, or pit silos or round bale silage, and 40 to 60 percent moisture for sealed upright silos. Making a good, tight pack assures an oxygen-free environment and depends much on fineness of chop, moisture content, and rate of fill. Silage preservatives, additives, and inoculants may improve silage fermentation in some cases but they are not a substitute for good management.

Used at recommended rates and properly applied, organic acid preservatives make it possible to successfully store alfalfa hay when baled at up to 30 percent moisture.

Chemical drying agents applied during mowing can reduce drying time. For more details, refer to Agronomy Facts 8: Chemical Conditioners for Hay, available at your county Penn State cooperative extension office.

Protect Bees From Mites

Two mites which attack honey bees have recently been introduced into the United States. One of these, the varroa mite, is a parasite that is killing colonies and drastically reducing honey yields. Varroa is considered by many to be the most devastating pest of honey bees in the world. This mite is present throughout much of the southern United States, where queen bees and packages are produced for sale. Many Pennsylvania beekeepers purchase queens and packages from the south each year.

Before shipment, queens and packages can be effectively treated for varroa mite with the pesticide Fluvalinate. This chemical is incorporated into plastic strips or tabs which are placed in close contact with the bees, killing any varroa mites present and not harming the bees. Unfortunately, many queen and package producers are not treating their bees before shipment unless requested to do so by the beekeeper purchasing the bees.

All beekeepers should require varroa mite treatment of all out-of-state packages and/or queen bees at the time they are ordered.

Pennsylvania is currently under a quarantine to keep varroa mites out of the state for as long as possible.

Soybean Outlook

United States soybean prices have fallen as South American production prospects have continued to be bright. The U.S. market is characterized by strong domestic demand for soybean meal and oil and weaker export prospects for both.

Low U.S. soybean meal prices, combined with profitable livestock feeding, have boosted meal use in recent months. U.S. soybean oil prices are competitive in the domestic market, and soybean oil is now capturing domestic market share lost to competing oils.

World soybean production is climbing substantially in 1989/1990 as U.S. and Argentine production rebounds from drought conditions. Record South American production is expected for the third consecutive year.

World demand is up as well, raising trade. But, expected gains in U.S. exports are being restrained by South American competition. U.S. soybean exports are forecast up about 12 percent, but exports of meal and oil are expected to be off by 9 and 13 percent. Improved European Community (EC) crush margins led the EC to favor bean imports over meal this season.

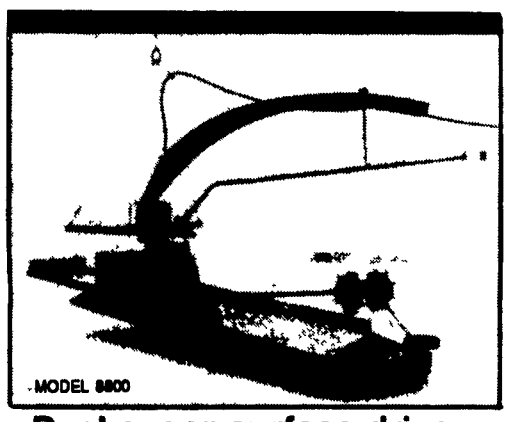
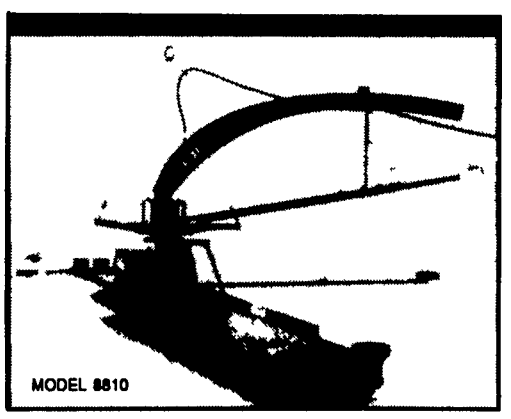
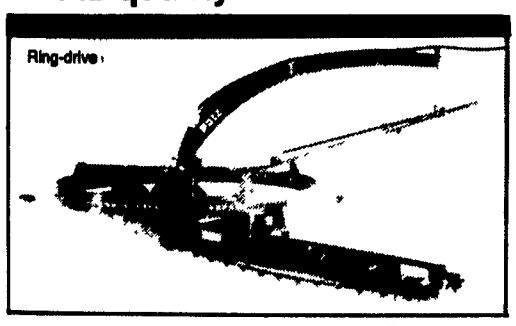
Patz - The Only Manufacturer Of Augers And Chain That Feature 4 Silo Unloaders To Fit Your Price And Performance Needs



Dual-auger surface-drive silo unloader with Patz quality



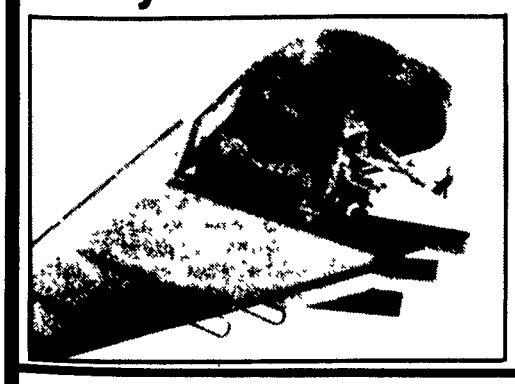
Dual-auger center-drive silo unloader with Patz quality



RD-820 RING-DRIVE SILO UNLOADER
Both silo unloaders have a double-hook gathering chain with hardened steel cutters and claws that cut through frozen and packed silage.

98B SURFACE-DRIVE SILO UNLOADER

Why Patz is No. 1



- Durable Patz hook-and-eye link chain. Progression forging builds extra strength into hook-and-eye link contact points. Final heat treating increases hardness, strength and wear resistance.
- Four-tooth sprocket drives every link behind the hook--the link's thickest and strongest point.
- Chain flexibility for various layouts.
- Select 2" flites for solid manure or 4" high flites for slurry manure. ¼ -inch-thick flites are welded to Patz links. ½ -inch-thick wear shoes extend flite life.
- Three drive unit sizes match your gutter length and allow expansion.
- Corner wheel top-and-bottom flanges guide the chain around the corner. Corner wheel assemblies remove easily for service without concrete breakout.
- Heavier XH link available for extremely long pulls.
